Soviet Bloc Courts War, Tito Says

Yugoslavs Assail 'Lies' In Charges Of a Plot

Belgrade, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The Yugoslav Government warned Russia and the Eastern European countries they are flirting with war in their attempts to overthrow Marshal Tito's regime.

The Yugoslav government charged also that the Soviet Union had trumped up the "monstrous" charges against it in the Hungarian government's indictment against former Hungarian Foreign Minister Laszlo Rajk.

Rajk goes on trial in Budapest Friday on charges of treason and espionage for Yugoslavia and the United States.

"Warmongering Provocation"

The statements were made in a 4000-word document released by the Yugoslav government press office on the eve of the trial.

The paper declared that "the indictment is actually a document of warmongering provocation which represents a serious blow to international peace and cooperation in this part of Europe."

It denied charges that Marshal Tito and other high-ranking members of the Belgrade regime plotted with Rajk to assassinate the Hungarian Communist leadership.

"Its contents, as well as the trial, which will be staged on the basis of the indictment, represent a new and monstrous anti-Yugoslav provocation," the document said.

"The aim of this provocation is falsely to accuse Yugoslavia, its government and party leadership of various actions, shoddy intentions and obscure schemes which, in fact, are being prepared or are already being carried out by leading Hungarian circles, together with the leaders of Albania, Romania, Bulgaria, Poland and Czechoslovakia, who were incited against Yugoslavia by the USSR with the aim of forcibly overthrowing the government of Yugoslavia, destroying the existing socialist order, and its economic subjugation."

Cites Aid to Hungary

The statement disclosed that provocative actions were taking place "daily" on the Yugoslav-Hungarian frontier, although no mention of any such incidents has been made in the Yugoslav press for some weeks. Hungarian border guards were said to be "particularly busy" in these actions.

It is clear that Hungary, the Soviet Union and other Cominform states are hatching nefarious plots, the paper said.

In discussing the charges of the Hungarian indictment, the Yugoslav document made these points, among others:

That Yugoslavia forgave Hungary its wartime atrocities, that it had renounced reparations, that it had given Hungary large-scale economic aid, and that until the Cominform resolution against Tito, the Hungarian Communist Party leadership repeatedly had ex-

B-36 Crashes Into Texas Lake; At Least 1 Dead

Forth Worth, Tex., Sept. 15 (AP). A B-36—world's largest bomber—plunged off a runway into Lake Worth tonight, killing at least one man.

Eighth Air Force headquarters said eight men were taken to the Carswell Air Force Base hospital. The B-36 normally carries a crew of 13, which could leave four men unaccounted for.

It was the first serious crash involving a B-36 since the huge plane began flying more than a year and a half ago.

The bomber crashed on a take-off with flames shooting from one engine.

Major Toy B. Husband, the pilot, was among those rescued. He was under treatment for shock and undetermined injuries.

Oyster Season Opens Without a Shot Fired

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

MOUTHFUL—George C. Yates of River Spring, Md., eats his first oyster of season, tonged yesterday near Morgantown, Md.

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Cobb Island, Md., Sept. 15.—The Potomac River oyster season opened peacefully today, without fanfare or gunfire.

In contrast to last year's curtain-raising burst of hot lead, the loudest noise today was from watermen who expressed surprise to learn that "patent" tongs are no longer legal in Maryland waters.

Both hand tongs and patent tongs, which are operated with a mechanical winch, have been permitted in the past.

The traditional "oyster war" between inspectors from Maryland (which governs the Potomac) and oystermen from Virginia has heretofore been fought over unlawful use of dredges.

The dredge is a rake-like device with a net, into which oysters are scooped as the dredge is towed behind a boat. It is hoisted aboard with a winch. Conservation authorities say it destroys already-depleted oyster beds.

The most, if not the only, disappointed witnesses to the serene

Navy Author Of Pentagon Blast Shifted

By The Associated Press

Secretary of the Navy Matthews announced last night that Capt. John G. Crommelin, blunt critic of the defense high command, had been shifted from his post with the Joint Chiefs of Staff because he had "disqualified" himself.

Matthews' explanation of the shift apparently overruled that of subordinate officials who earlier had indicated that the transfer was a pat on the back for Crommelin.

In midafternoon, the Navy's press section announced that Crommelin had been given a post formerly held by a two-star admiral—as director of Navy aviation personnel.

But a few hours later, Matthews countermanded that announcement with a statement of his own saying that Crommelin had been transferred to the office of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air.

Matthews said Crommelin has been assigned "for duty in the air warfare division under Rear Admiral E. A. Cruise."

Matthews' statement, issued last night, said:

"Captain Crommelin in a statement of his views concerning unification obviously disqualified himself for continuation in his present assignment on the Joint Staff which is an agency of the unified National Defense Department."

The previous announcement by the Navy press section had said Crommelin would direct Navy air personnel, succeeding Rear Admiral F. W. McMahon, who was

Big Three Ask Austrian Pact Talk Renewal

By The Associated Press

The Western Big Three foreign ministers climaxed their conferences on cold war political issues by calling on Soviet Russia last night to resume broken-off negotiations for a "satisfactory" treaty with Austria.

Secretary of State Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Bevin and Foreign Minister Schuman of France also hailed the formation of the new Bonn government of Germany as the successful culmination of their plans for dealing with the German occupation after the breakdown of four-power rule.

The three met behind closed doors at the State Department for nearly four hours. A joint communique said they explored the Austrian treaty difficulties, possible new working arrangements in Germany, and "also exchanged views on current developments in Yugoslavia and the Balkans."

The session concluded three days of a full-dress review of political problems facing the West, which Schuman joined yesterday. No meeting is scheduled for today, but a final session may be held on Saturday to take up Far Eastern questions that were not touched on yesterday.

Negotiations for an Austrian treaty came to a halt September 1 at London with the Foreign ministers' deputies far apart on Russian demands, which Acheson said would saddle burdens on Austria which that country could not sustain and remain independent. Moscow has failed to reply to an American proposal that the negotiations be resumed September 22 at New York.

Jury Finds Almost No Gaming As 10 Are Fined in Hyattsville

Nine Men, Woman In Guilty Pleas

Nine men and one woman pleaded guilty to gambling charges in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday and were fined a total of $3900 by Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie.

Wilton A. Hartman, 28, of 4831 Huron ave., Suitland Manor, Md., pleaded innocent to gaming charges and was exonerated by Magistrate Bowie.

Hartman was a defendant in a case which also involved Hyman Sussman, 40, of 3215 Chesapeake st. nw.; Harry Shapiro, 50, of 2408 16th st. nw.; Adolph Olewack, 43, of 812 Jefferson st. nw.; George Raynor, 50, of 200 Evans le., Alexandria, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Report Clears Police Of Improper Conduct

There is virtually no gambling in Prince Georges County, its police officers are as honest as the day is long, and a legal lottery would be just dandy, a special grand jury reported yesterday.

In a 3½-page report, the jurymen told Judge Charles C. Marbury they believed gambling is at an "almost irreducible minimum," but offered a three-pronged proposal to stamp out "isolated instances of a minor nature."

Their recommendations called for more severe punishment on future gambling violators, closer scrutiny by the Board of Liquor Commissioners on applicants for liquor licenses and a study on the advisability of consolidating town and county police agencies to effect a more efficient police organization.

The jury, eliminating a six-month investigation of conditions in the county, cleared local law-enforcement officials of "possible improper conduct" and said state-

Continent To Share in Dollar Help

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Concessions made to Britain to ease her dollar shortage will be "equally applicable" to all the Marshall Plan countries of Europe, the United States promised yesterday.

The promise was given to Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France at a meeting attended by Secretaries Snyder and Acheson and high officials of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

European officials in Washington promptly hailed it as proof that no exclusive Anglo-American-Canadian club was formed in the three-power dollar discussions that ended on Monday. The French, in particular, welcomed it as an act of great political and psychological value, not only to them but to all their neighbors and partners on the Continent.

Feared Being Shut Out

Some European officials had been fearful that their countries would be shut out of the American-British-Canadian agreements, and that European economic cooperation would be undermined.

Although the tangible benefits to the continental countries may be small at first, an announcement by ECA yesterday brought Britain its first important dollar relief as a result of the three-power financial and economic talks here.

The ECA authorized the British to spend 175 million of their Marshall Plan dollars to buy wheat in Canada, although wheat has been in surplus in the United States for many months.

Present ECA legislation provides that a commodity in surplus must be bought in the United States "insofar as practicable." The ECA took advantage of this loophole so that Britain could conserve her diminishing dollar reserves.

Sees U. S. Farmer Helped

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan approved the decision yesterday, saying it would help rather than hurt the American farmer. He added that the British would use their own dollar resources now to buy 30 million dollars' worth of wheat (about 15 million bushels) and about 8 to 10 million dollars' worth of perishable American farm commodities which they had not previously planned to buy.

A second ECA concession, made known at the same time, will let the British use about 30 million Marshall Plan dollars to pay for bunkering, repairing and supplying their ships in American ports. Until now, the British have been denied Marshall Plan funds for this purpose, and have had to use their own fast-dwindling dollar resources.

25% Slash Is Planned in D. C. Budget

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A 25 percent cut is now planned in the 150-million-dollar budget requested by District agency heads for the fiscal year starting next July 1.

Both the 150-million-dollar figure and the percentage by which the District Commissioners are expected to trim it are still estimates.

But they are close enough to have been made the basis of testimony by District Deputy Budget Officer William G. Wilding to a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday.

Close to 150 Million

Subcommittee members asked Wilding about published reports that District agency heads had filed requests for close to 150 million dollars. He indicated that was close to the total, but pointed out that the agency requests must be tailored by the Commissioners to available revenue.

He predicted that the trimming of the agency estimates would result in a Commissioners' budget figure of about 112 million dollars for the 1951 fiscal year. It is the Commissioners' budget that goes to Congress in January and becomes the basis for the annual District appropriation bill.

Wilding said that when the books are closed on the fiscal year which ended last June 30, they will show a budget total of about 105 million dollars. This includes what the city already has spent, plus the cost of the still unpaid retroactive pay increase for municipal employes for that year.

One Element of Uncertainty

He said this year's budget, including amounts already appropriated and amounts still to be asked for financing the higher pay costs that began with the new fiscal year, will total about 108 million.

Wilding told the committee there is still one big element of uncertainty about the future budget—that is the amount of revenue the city can expect from its new revenue law. In the law, the 2 per cent District sales tax is to be the biggest money raiser, and the first returns on which future income from it can be judged are not due until later this month. The return date for merchants who collect the tax to pay it into the District Building is September 20.

Officials estimated before the tax was enacted that it would bring in about 13.5 million a year, but their estimates for other taxes included in the new revenue law, like the cigarette tax, have turned out to be low.

As the Senate subcommittee hearing opened, Wilding drew a

European Newsmen Hear Vandenberg Urge Self-Help

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), last night urged Western European countries to hasten self-sufficiency through their own cooperative efforts.

"No matter what our cooperative disposition or our self-interest," the senior Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said, "there are definite limits to the American resources which we can safely invest in foreign aid.

"Recognition of this fact is as important to you as it is to us, because our unweakened strength is a common asset for us all. These limits must not and will not be overreached."

Vandenberg addressed an audience of about 350 persons at a dinner given by the Overseas Writers at the National Press Club in honor of 50 prominent European newspapermen. The newspapermen, from 14 different countries, are touring the United States as guests of American Airlines.

The European journalists presented gifts to Gen. George C. Marshall, former Secretary of State.

Also honored were Gen. William J. Donovan, wartime head of the Office of Strategic Services, who headed a committee for the Overseas Writers and allied organizations which investigated the murder of Correspondent George Polk in Greece in May, 1948. Guy Martin, of New York, who assisted Donovan on the committee, also was lauded.

Vandenberg, speaking in a room decorated with the flags of the United States and Four Freedoms, said "there are definite limits to the practical utility and wisdom of external aid because it must not drift into a permanent reliance.

'Thinking' Machine Sets Type Perfectly on Film; No Metal

Boston, Sept. 15 (AP).—An amazing new machine that sets type quickly and perfectly on film, without using metal, was announced today.

Publishers and scientists declared it promises to revolutionize the printing field, bringing enormous savings over present costs of printing newspapers, books, and magazines, and a huge growth in spread of knowledge.

The machine uses an ordinary typewriter keyboard, and a stenographer can run it. The machine thinks, in order to space all lines perfectly and instantly. It uses a photoelectric gun to print on the film each letter or character struck on the keyboard.

It can print in any families or styles of type, in any desired size from headlines to small print, at any desired moment. It photographs six letter a second, or 12 newspaper column lines a minute. It could go to 20 lines a minute, or 2½ times the top capacity speed of linotype machine setting metal type.

A reporter in a hurry might set his own story in type as he wrote it. It is even possible that some day the Associated Press and other news organizations could transmit a story and have it received in type by member newspapers in whatever type style and size each one wanted.

The film can be used to make offset plates for offset printing, or regular photo-engravings for reg-

Minton Nominated For Supreme Court

By Edward T. Folliard

SHERMAN MINTON
Supreme Court nominee

President Truman yesterday nominated Sherman (Shay) Minton of Indiana to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

The 58-year-old Hoosier was a sharp critic of the high tribunal back in the 1930s when he was an all-out New Dealer and sat alongside Mr. Truman in the Senate.

Judge Minton, now on the bench of the Seventh United States Circuit Court of Appeals, made a proposal in 1936 to limit the power of the Supreme Court to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional. The next year he supported the Roosevelt plan for reorganizing the Supreme Court, denounced by critics as a scheme to "pack" that court with friendly judges.

All indications on Capitol Hill yesterday pointed to Senate confirmation of the Minton nomination.

President Truman announced at a White House news conference that he had chosen Minton to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death Saturday of Associate Justice Wiley Rutledge. He sent the nomination papers to the Senate later in the day.

At the same time, Mr. Truman sent along these other nominations:

Walter C. Lindley of Danville, Ill., Federal judge of the Eastern Illinois District, to succeed Minton

'Big Steel' Again Rejects Ultimatum

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The CIO Steelworkers and United States Steel yesterday swapped verbal blows for the second day in a row, blaming each other for an impending Nation-wide steel strike, scheduled te begin next Wednesday morning.

Philip Murray, president of the million-member union, demanded for a second time that the Nation's No. 1 steel company accept the recommendations of the President's fact-finding board as a condition to further negotiations.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the gigantic corporation, for a second time rejected the ultimatum.

Companions Accused

The union leader charged that United States Steel, and other steel producers "slavishly" following its steps, are "deliberately seeking to force a strike."

The management leader countered by blaming Murray for any resulting walkout. "I repeat," wired Fairless to Murray, "the responsibility is yours."

The exchange of challenges and charges came several hours after President Truman, at his press conference yesterday, apparently agreed with United States Steel's contention that the fact-finders' recommendaions were to be taken as a basis for negotiations.

Mr. Truman said he hoped the negotiations would move ahead to a settlement. In answer to a direct question ,the Chief Executive said he thought there was a decided difference between accepting a thing as a basis for negotiations and acceptance of a recommendation outright.

Three Recommendations

The fact-finders made three recommendations: withdrawal of pay-raise demands by the union; immediate setting up of a social insurance program, costing 4 cents per hour per worker, to be financed exclusively by employers; and establishment next year of a pension program, costing 6 cents per hour per worker, also to be paid solely by the companies.

Murray and the steelworkers accepted the fact-finding report in its entirety and called on the steel industry to do likewise before further negotiations.

U. S. Files Suit To Split Huge A. & P. Chain

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Justice Department filed suit today to split up the huge food chain of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.

The company called the anti-trust action "an attack on the entire system of efficient, low-cost, low-profit mass distribution." It said, "We sold good food too cheap."

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath's suit in Federal District Court here seeks a court order forcing A. & P. to divide its Nation-wide food store network into seven independently owned retail chains.

Stock Drops $4.50

Separation of A. & P.'s manufacturing and food processing business from its buying and selling activities also is sought. And the department asks that the company's big wholesale fruit and vegetable subsidiary, the Atlantic Commission Co., be dissolved.

A. & P. stock, traded in the New York Curb Exchange, dropped $4.50 a share today, closing at $119. This morning the stock had opened at $123.

The A. & P. operates 6000 stores across the country, which last year grossed sales of nearly three billion dollars.

"The suit is designed to eliminate the abuse by A. & P. of its mass buying and mass selling power," McGrath said in a statement. The complaint charged the company had used its position to "impose unreasonable restraints of trade upon,competitors at all levels of the food industry from farm to table."

Paid $175,000 Fines

An A. & P. official said: "There is nothing even approaching monopoly here; for as every housewife knows, the retail grocery business is the most competitive in the country and we do only a small part of it. Nor was there ever any charge that we raised prices; for the whole basis of this attack is the fact that we sold good food too cheap.

U. S. Trying to Barter Eggs For Strategic Items Abroad

Brannan Is Victim Of Scrambled Wires

Agriculture Secretary Brannan was amazed Wednesday when he got a telegram accusing him of speculating in eggs.

More amazing, the wire came from a subcommittee headed by Brannan's good friend, former boss and predecessor in the Cabinet, Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.).

The wire read:

"You are hereby invited to appear before the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee under the chairmanship of Senator Anderson to give testimony in connection with your activities in trading in eggs on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. This is pursuant to Bill S2482 recently introduced by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma."

The message then set the date for next Monday and asked Brannan what witnesses would accompany him.

Price Support Drop Will Be Opposed

By John W. Ball

The Agriculture Department is trying to barter some of its 92 million dollars worth of surplus eggs under authority for such transactions granted in the new Commodity Credit Corporation charter.

The extension of the CCC charter permits CCC to trade surplus agriculture products to foreign, dollar-poor countries for scarce and strategic materials. William D. Termohlen, chief of the egg branch, told a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee yesterday, he hoped to get rid of some of the Government's stock of dried and frozen eggs in that manner.

(The existence of the barter provision in the CCC charter was pointed out by The Washington Post in a recent editorial.)

Termohlen indicated that the department would oppose dropping the price support for eggs at 90 per cent of parity until after next

Victory Won For Truman As Trade Bill Passes Senate

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday presented President Truman with a two-year renewal of his reciprocal trade program without a single restrictive curb on his bargaining powers.

The final tally was 62 to 19 but some test votes were so close that Vice President Barkley for the first time since taking office used his power to break a tie.

The sweeping Administration victory renews until June 12, 1951, the President's 16-year-old authority to raise or lower tariffs, and wipes out "peril point" restrictions approved by the Eightieth Congress.

Now Awaits Signature

The bill went immediately to the White House for signature, the House having previously approved.

The Administration, backed for the first time this session by an almost solid party line, defeated the GOP's new "peril point" amendment by a safe 5-vote margin, and then received the scare of its life.

Senators from oil and fur States forgot all about party in a drive to slap quota restrictions on foreign imports of those two commodities.

A series of confused votes, reminiscent of the gone but not forgotten days of tariff log-rolling, shoved tariff restrictions in and out of the bill in parliamentary maneuvers that left leaders breathless.

Even the tally clerk got mixed up but Barkley was Johnny-on-the-spot to break the ties. In the end the Senate passed a completely "clean bill," as free of tariff kinks as the one passed by the House.

Called Major Hurdle

The "peril point" amendment of Senator Eugene Millikin (R., Colo.) had been heralded as the Administration's major hurdle. Forming a phalanx to beat this, Democratic leaders almost got flanked by the special tariff exemption blocs.

Had the Millikin amendment won, the Tariff Commission would have been empowered again to set points below which Mr. Truman could not cut tariffs without damage to American industries. If the President exceeded these, he would have to account to Congress.

The Senate defeated this by a vote of 43 to 38, thanks partly to GOP absenteeism. The 35 Republicans present voted solidly for the restriction, and they were joined by three Democrats, (Johnson, Colo., O'Mahoney, Wyo., and Thomas, Okla.). The 43 for it were all Democrats.

Eight Republicans and five Democrats were absent. Senators try to make their votes count indirectly when absent by "pairing" but only three Republicans were able to arrange pairs. All of the

Syria Buys Arms With German Cash, Israeli Declares

Tel Aviv, Sept. 15 (NYHT).—A high Israeli government source declared today that authentic evidence had been received here of the transfer to the Syrian government through a Swiss brokerage house of 20 million dollars in erstwhile German accounts.

It is alleged here that this transaction explains the source of Syrian funds for reported large-scale arms purchases throughout Europe. "We are extremely concerned about it," this official declared.

He asserted that the transfer was arranged by a Capt. Abdullah Rauff, former official of the security service of the German Gestapo, now allegedly employed as military advisor to the Syrian government.

Mr. Truman two weeks ago suggested the two governments adopt a plan which would have given retired United States Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz the power to work out a truce.

Soviet Spy Allowed To Flee, Probe Told

By The Associated Press

A former FBI agent testified yesterday that the State Department blocked the arrest of Russia's No. 1 atom bomb spy in this country and the man later escaped.

Larry E. Kerley, who said he was an FBI operative from 1937 to 1945, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee that a network of several hundred Soviet spies operated in the United States during the war.

Russia's "best agents," he said, were assigned to ferret out A-bomb secrets.

Kerley testified that although the FBI was aware of their movements, the Federal bureau was not permitted to "open up" Russian espionage cases—or arrest the plotters—without the State Department's approval.

Says Adams Fled to Russia

The witness, now a member of the New York Journal-American editorial staff, said the State Department refused to permit the arrest of Arthur Alexandrovich Adams, whom he named as the most active Soviet agent in early atomic spying. Adams subsequently fled to Russia, he said.

Kerley said the State Department's no-arrest order was still in effect when he left the FBI in October, 945. He said the FBI kept the department "closely advised" on Soviet spy activities.

Another case of State Department intervention against arrest of known Soviet agents, Kerley told Chairman O'Connor (D., Md.), was that involving Andrei V. Shevchenko—representative of the Soviet purchasing commission at the Bell Aircraft Co. plant in Buffalo.

This case was first brought to light by the House Un-American Activities Committee. Shevchenko was uncloaked by Loyal Bell Co. employes from whom he tried to buy plane secrets.

Gives Long List of Names

The Comintern Secret Intelligence—"the litle known OMS"—has one section which does nothing but process United States passports for its agents, the witness said.

Kerley gave a long list of names which he said the FBI had uncovered in the Soviet espionage web—contacts, mail drops, official Soviet representatives and others.

West Coast operations, Kerley testified, centered in Gregory Markovitch Kheifets, Vice Consul at San Francisco, who he said used the cover name of "Mr. Brown."

Another important agent he named as Steve Nelson, the Communist Party organizer for western Pennsylvania and leader of the American Slav Congress. Nelson has previously been called by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Truman, Acheson Call U. N. Only Bulwark to World Peace

President Truman said yesterday day that the United Nations "is the only bulwark we have for the peace of the world."

Secretary of State Acheson seconded him with the assertion that cooperation among nations is "constantly growing in strength and effectiveness despite all obstacles."

Mr. Truman spoke personally from the porch outside his office to the National Citizens Committee for United Nations Day, gathered in the White House rose garden.

Acheson's statement was read for him to the same group, which is arranging for the observance October 24.

The President said United States support of the United Nations is "absolutely essential" to obtain world peace.

"And I am sure that we are going to obtain it if we continue to support the United Nations with everything we have, which we have been doing up to this time," he added.

Mr. Truman was introduced by Mrs. Anne Johnstone, acting chairman of the committee, representing the League of Women Voters. The league is one of numerous organizations sponsoring the United Nations celebration.

The President expressed pleasure that the group "has begun to get ready for this celebration early."

He said 48 nations took notice in 1948 of October 24 as the birthday of U. N.

"I am exceedingly anxious that 1949 shall see an all-out celebration around the world," he said.

He promised "the whole-hearted cooperation of the President and the Government of the United States."

Secretary Acheson said the current conferences in Washington among representatives of the western powers are being "carried forward in the spirit of the United Nations charter and in the furtherance of its principles and purposes."

Acheson said further that in the new session of the U. N. General Assembly opening next week the United States delegation will make a "determined, patient, conscientious effort" to reconcile conflicting interests and reach agreement on a basis for common action with other U. N. members.

In its four years, the United Nations has been getting "positive results," Acheson said, in its effort to prevail on the world's peoples to compromise their differences instead of fighting over them. He said the U. N. is also beginning to get results in its efforts to alleviate hunger, disease, poverty and ignorance.

UMW Chief Wages 3-Front 'Cold War'

Generalissimo John L. Lewis conducted "cold war" on three coal fronts yesterday without giving a hint as to when he would strike it hot.

The boss of the United Mine Workers for a third time demanded that the big Island Creek Coal Co. of West Virginia end its holdout of 20-cents-a-ton royalty payments into the miners' welfare fund.

Turned down by the management of the mine, then turned down by the bank that he says controls the mine, Lewis yesterday—in effect—directed his third call to the depositors of the bank.

On Wednesday, I. F. Freiberger, board chairman of the Cleveland Trust Co., denied Lewis' assertion that the bank, acting as trustee for the Holden estate, held a controlling stock interest in the Island Creek Coal Co. The bank's interest was no more than one third, Freiberger said.

Lewis insisted in a second wire to the bank yesterday that a one-third interest "in a corporation whose stock is so widely scattered constitutes absolute and unqualified control."

The leader of 600,000 coal miners declared in his wire that he doubted the 704,000 depositors of the bank "want to see their money used to support the Island Creek Coal Company in treating coal miners in beastly fashion."

Frieberger promptly replied to Lewis as follows: "We as trustees are fully in accord with the decision of the company not to make payments into the welfare fund under existing conditions."

The Island Creek Coal Co. and other coal operators associated with the Southern Coal Producers Association have refused since July to contribute to the welfare fund on the ground that there has been no work contract in effect since that date.

On a second front, at Bluefield, W. V., UMW negotiators abruptly ended two days of negotiations—really no more than verbal sparring—with the Southern producers. The talks will be resumed September 20.

John L. himself, armed with black brief case, made a personal appearance on the third front at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where he renewed UMW negotiations with the Northern and Western coal producers.

Washington, Bluefield, and White Sulphur Springs, where rampant where rumors that John L.'s miners—currently working on a three-day week—would strike Monday against those producers who have "struck" against the royalty payments, but there was no definite word from the generalissimo himself.

Meanwhile, the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway and the Louisville & Nashville Railroad announced layoffs yesterday on account of the three-day work week in the coal mines, instituted on July 1 by Lewis. The C. & O laid off 914 shopworkers; L. & N. furloughed 350.

The United Mine Workers Journal, the union's weekly, yesterday sneered at what it described as a "2-cent gain" made by the CIO Steel Workers as a result of accepting the presidential fact-finding board.

The mine union publication, which never fails to point out how much better John L. Lewis does by his miners than Phil Murray—a former UMW vice president—does by his steel workers, estimated that the steel union at best would get no more than 2 cents in social insurance this year.

Probationary
53 Laid Off By Transit Company

The Capital Transit Co. has handed layoff notices to 53 probationary employes, none of them operators, and will discharge about 20 more workers next week, it was disclosed yesterday.

A company spokesman said during the past two weeks notices were given to 23 maintenance of way workers, of whom there is normally an operating force of about 500, and to 30 mechanical employes, of whom there is normally a force of about 1000.

Capital Transit, which has approximately 5000 employes, said the 20 or so workers to be laid off next week will be maintenance of way men.

150 Operators Needed

The company emphasized that it still needs about 150 operators. None of the men who are being laid off could qualify as operators, the company spokesman said.

The 53 employes who have already been notified of their lay-off will be terminated at the end of this week.

The company spokesman said part of the reason for the layoff is seasonal. Maintenance of way crews do most of their work during the warm months and less and less work as the weather grows cold.

Turnover Lessening

Another factor has been the lessening of turnover. Normally there would be enough persons quitting their jobs to keep the personnel within proper bounds, but recently this has not been so.

Officials of Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, could not be reached immediately for comment. They were reported to be attending a union convention in Pittsburgh.

Latest available figures for the transit system show that revenue passengers in July numbered 24,172,674—a sharp decrease of 4,347,211, or 15 per cent less than in the same 1948 month.

Deficit Shown for July

July, seasonally a poor transit month, resulted in a deficit of $15,085 against a red-ink figure of $25,197 in the same period last year.

Although revenue passengers for the first seven months this year showed a decline of 10.7 per cent, earnings improved considerably over last year due to a fare increase. Net income for the first seven months totaled $502,260, an increase of $150,844, or 43 per cent, over the like period last year.

Efforts to economize are evident in the company's report that car miles operated through July 31 were reduced 12 per cent, while bus miles showed a 11.3 per cent increase. Bus travel is more economical than street cars.

U. S. Files Suit to Split Up 6000-Store A. & P. Network antitrust laws themselves, to justify the dissolution of A. & P.

The company was convicted under antitrust statutes at Danville, Ill., three years ago. Early this year the criminal conviction was upheld in the U. S. Court of Appeals at Chicago and the A. & P. paid fines of $175,000.

That unanimous decision of the Court of Appeals, incidentally, was written by Circuit Judge Sherman Minton—today designated to the Supreme Court by President Truman.

"As was found in the criminal case, A. & P. expanded its retail sales, and eliminated competition from independent grocers, meat dealers, and local food chains by temporarily selling food at a loss in selected retail areas in order to expand its sales outlets in such areas and recouping these losses by charging consumers higher prices in less competitive retail areas."

The deartment proposes that the present chain of about 6000 retail stores be split up into seven independent companies, with the A.&P. being allowed to own only one division of perhaps about 800 stores. However, the court would determine the final form of the proposed dissolution.

An A.&P. official said this action would be "just opposite to the purpose of the antitrust laws, which were meant to increase competition and keep prices down; for if it succeeds, it will serve only to cut down competition and force prices up . . .

"Frankly," the official said, "the owners of A. & P. could make enormous amounts of money by breaking up this company, as the antitrust lawyers wish, and selling off the parts. But we believe this attack is a threat to millions of consumers who rely on us for quality foods at low prices . . ."

Another company spokesman said the A. & P. annual retail food :ales "have been running between 7 and 8 per cent of the 32 billion dollars worth of food sold across the Nation's retail grocery counters annually."

For the fiscal year ended February 28, the company reported sales of $2,837,291,185 and net profit of $38,661,751. The spokesman said A. & P.'s profit amounted to less than one and one-half cents of the sales dollar.

Herbert A. Bergson, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division, said in a statement:

"Neither the criminal action nor this civil action is an attack upon integration or size or the power that accompanies integration or size. On the contrary, they are directed at the abuse or exercise of such power to impose unreasonable and harmful restraints upon every phase of the food industry."

Firm Gets $8437 Over Truman Veto

Overruling President Truman's veto, Congress yesterday agreed to pay a Gallatin, Tenn., tobacco firm $8437 for tobacco stamps it lost in a fire December 24, 1945.

The Senate voted 45 to 6 to override the President, who argued that legally stamps, like money, must be submitted in recognizable form if the owner seeks reimbursement. The House previously had voted to override.

'Big Steel' Rejects Strike Ultimatum

and Fairless made it appear last night the White House may have to intercede for a third time to avert a steel strike at a time when industrial production is rebounding from a summer slump.

Intervention by President Truman postponed the scheduled walkout for 60 days and then for 11 days more. The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service is expected to step into the dispute today.

Meanwhile, a number of steelworkers locals were making strike preparations yesterday. Heads of locals in the Youngstown, Ohio, area were notified by James P. Griffin, director of District 26, that a walkout at 12:01 a. m. September 25 "now appears definitely certain." About half the steelworkers' million members would be involved in Wednesday's walkout.

In his second telegram to Fairless, Murray declared:

"Your wire and statement of yesterday (Tuesday(constitute a flat rejection . . . of the recommendations of the steel industry board. Your corporation refuses to bargain with the union on the basis of the board's recommendations.

"No amount of double-talk can conceal the fact of this outright refusal on your part."

Murray said that the union, despite giving up its demand for a wage increase, accepted the board's report "in recognition of the public interest" and in the hope of averting a strike. He then charged United States Steel with "deliberately" trying to force the strike.

Murray, who heads the CIO also, insisted that "public opinion has approved and accepted the report of the steel industry board as a suitable basis on which to conclude a fair and equitable settlement . . .

"The press, the radio, public officials and private citizens with a degree of unanimity unsurpassed in prior situations of like character have joined in indorsing the report."

"Public Be Damned"

The attitude of U. S. Steel, Murray charged, is one of "the public be damned." He then hurled back at Fairless the latter's accustation that Murray was seeking to impose the will of the union on the steel company as regards the fact-finding report.

Murray wrote:

"You presume to dictate that further bargaining shall take place without reference to the recommendations of the board . . . You presume to dictate that any plan of social insurance and pensions shall be bargained upon only on the basis of a contributory program.

"You assert that this is a matter of fundamental principle, notwithstanding that you . . . and other executives in your corporation and in the industry will enjoy substantial pensions upon retirement based upon noncontributory programs created by the industry for the benefit of its executives rather than its workers."

Murray declared that the union "and the public" will not and do not accept "any such unfair dictates."

Fairless Replies

The CIO chief concluded his message with the statement that the impending strike still can be averted "if your co-operation and the rest of the industry will agree with the union and with public opinion to accept the recommendations of the steel industry board as a basis for negotiating a prompt settlement."

Several hours later, Fairless replied.

He said to Murray:

"Your further telegram of today is nothing more than a repetition of your dictatorial message of yesterday. . . . I told you yesterday and I now confirm that we decline to accept your ultimatum which is both unfair and contrary to the assurance given us by the President . . . that the recommendations of the board would not be binding upon either party."

Fairless said that as he had told Murray twice before this week, U. S. Steel is ready "promptly to resume collective bargaining conferences. . . ."

He repeated that U. S. Steel was willing to pay as high as four cents for social insurance, but with the union also contributing; and that the company was prepared to undertake a joint study of pensions with the union.

Murray Lauded

A number of other companies have, like United States Steel, taken the position they will bargain over social insurance and the pension program, without making a flat commitment on the fact-finders' ecommendations.

In Washington, Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) denounced United States Steel for having an "utter lack of concern for the public welfare" in its disputes with the union.

At the same time, Humphrey praised Murray and the steelworkers for "having demonstrated statesmanship and public responsibility in their prompt response to the recommendations and observations" of the President's fact-finding board.

Harry Lauder Weaker

Strathaven, Scotland, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Sir Harry Lauder, 79-year-old Scots minstrel bedridden since August 20 with uremia and cerebral thrombosis, was a little weaker today although he spent "a fairly comfortable night," a bulletin from his home said today.

Committee of South Reports Advances

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

A relatively more rapid advance is being made in the South in planning for social services such as education and health than possibly in any other phase of State planning and development, the National Planning Association Committee of the South said in a report made public today.

The report, prepared by Prof. Albert Lepawsky of the University of Alabama, delved into the planning and development of the South's natural resources, economic research, State promotion and advertising, subsidization of industry, public works and other facets of social and economic problems.

"Although the southern State planning-development agencies seem to be making a comparatively greater effort in the field of economic development," Lepawsky reported, "there is growing up in the field of social service planning a longer-range, more comprehensive, and more scientic scheduling and programming of public facilities for the administration of direct governmental services to a more extensive segment of the State's population."

School Surveys

The western areas of the south, the report said, are not as active in this field as the others, but tend to emphasize rather industrial planning.

In the remaining Southern States, it was said, the educational functions usually involve surveys of the school population, the siting of schools and the programing of school construction.

Criticism was leveled at the tendency in some of the States to place undue stress on promotional and other activities designed to bring in industries at the expense of the planning phase.

Public Works Planning Lags

The report compared the thesis that promotion of industry will result in a higher standard of living with better health, education, security and social services as a byproduct with the theory officially expressed in Tennessee that "a community must first be attractive as a place to live if industry's attention is to be invited."

State public works planning has faltered, the report indicated.

In 1947, the report declared, Maryland and Florida were the two Southern States which had made most progress with their public works programming.

Only a few southern planning and development agencies do any appreciable work in the field of mineral resource, the report complained.

The South, the report said, through State and local planning boards and the Tennessee Valley Authority has experienced perhaps a greater measure of governmental planning than any other region of the country.

The Southern States have responded more enthusiastically to the program of soil conservation districts than other regions, the report asserted.

Atomic Energy Mentioned

The report stressed that southern State agencies should begin analyzing problems inherent in the shifting of labor from farm to non-farm employment and the accompanying trend toward city and suburban development.

In addition, Lepawsky said, there is need for greater foresight in planning for the intensified use of electric power or atomic energy.

Professor Lepawsky concluded his report with the following recommendations:

1. Bring and keep up-to-date a general State master plan of public properties and construction; encourage departments to plan their respective segments to fit into the over-all State needs; and stimulate local planning, including zoning.

2. Launch a State public works improvements program and give technical aid to local public works programming.

3. Plan the physical facilities for public and social services such as schools, hospitals, parks, playgrounds, forests and public housing, including the stimulation of local or regional planning for these functions. The planning agency, however, should avoid a departure from over-all physical planning. It should not engage in the promotion of the public function itself, except for making the necessarily related fiscal and governmental studies.

4. Plan for the optimum utilization of natural resources: forests, land, water and minerals. Unless this is done, the exhaustion of such resources may lead to more drastic public controls than mere conservation.

5. Survey State-wide industrial and agricultural potentials giving due account to natural resources and labor supply. This will require analyses and advice concerning the whole productive economy, including the transportation and communication facilities within the State.

6. Transfer to other State agencies the function of State advertising, the more strictly promotional activities.

7. Transfer also to other State agencies administrative research as well as administrative duties which are not relevant to planning or development. Governmental research or emergency administration belongs with the departments concerned. While the assumption of these functions may temporarily enhance the prestige of the planning agency, they ultimately interfere with the responsibility of the planning agency and set a poor example for sound planning in the administration of State government.

Dr. Adenauer Chancellor by Bare Majority

Bonn, Sept. 15 (NYHT).—The new West German Parliament today, by a bare majority elected Dr. Konrad Adenauer, 73-year-old Christian Democrat, as the first German Chancellor since Hitler.

The conservative leader, who has announced his intention of forming a right-wing coalition government, received in the balloting in the Bundestag (lower house) just exactly the constitutional minimum number of votes required for his election—202 out of a total 402 possible votes. Since Dr. Adenauer himself cast a ballot, this means that he was a decisive factor in his own election.

The narrow margin indicates that Dr. Adenauer will from the very beginning have a stormy time getting his legislative program through Parliament and keeping together the right-wing followers on whom he depends.

As expected, the Social Democrats and Communists, joined in opposition to him. They produced a total of 144 "no" votes.

But more significant were the 44 abstentions involving members of the right-wing parties. Blank ballots were reportedly cast not only by members of the right-wing party, Deutscherechtspartei, but also by the Conservative Bavarian Party and a few of the Bavarian Christian Democrats who are miffed because several of their delegates were maneuvered out of promised parliamentary posts in the opening session last week. The Socialist Centrim was also said to be among the abstainers.

U. S., Britain, Greece Confer On Albania

Athens, Sept. 15 (AP)—The United States and British Ambassadors had long talks today with Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris of Greece, which has threatened to invade Albania if Greek guerillas attack her again from Albanian soil.

Tsaldaris said later no pressure was exerted on him in connection with the Albanian case. He said the discussions generally involved the Greek situation as related to the United States and Britain. There were conferences in Washington, too, he said, between British Foreign Minister Bevin and Secretary of State Acheson.

(The Greek-Albanian situation was described by an informed British source in London as one with dangerous potentialities. He said 'the hope is that Albania will not provoke Greece, or that Greece will refuse to be provoked.")

(Foreign observers in Moscow said they believed the Soviet Union would regard any Greek invasion of the little Communist nation on the Adriatic, for whatever reason, in a most serious light.)

Tsaldaris leaves tonight for the United States by plane to head the Greek delegation to the United Nations.

The British Ambassador, Sir Clifford Norton, and United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady each had an hour's talk with Tsaldaris.

Premier Alexander Diomedes, in a statement to the Royalist newspaper Vradyni, defended Greece's attitude and emphasized that Greece would not attack unless attacked.

Dulles, Lehman Get Senate Race Bids

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Foreign policy expert John Foster Dulles and former Democratic Gov. Herbert H. Lehman were nominated today to make the two-party race for the United States Senate in New York's special November election.

Dulles, personal friend and adviser to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, won the Republican nod at the GOP State Committee meeting here. Lehman was nominated by Democrats meeting in New York City. He will be indorsed by the Liberal Party. Both nominations were unanimous and had been expected.

The 71-year-old Lehman, former "strong right arm" of the late President Roosevelt, accepted the formal nomination with a call to Democrats and Republicans alike to back up President Truman's civil rights program.

Pledges 'Fair Deal' Aid

Lehman pledged his efforts to get President Truman's "Fair Deal" program carried out.

The 71-year-old financier also came out squarely for Federal aid to all schools—parochial as well as public. He expressed opposition to the Barden bill, which would exclude private schools from Federal aid to education.

"I am opposed," he said, "to discrimination of any kind."

(New York's Francis Cardinal Spellman, in his recent controversy with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, assailed the Barden bill.

(Lehman defended Mrs. Roosevelt after the cardinal accused her of anti-Catholic bias.)

Dulles said the Truman Administration was nearing the "point of no return" on the "road to statism."

In his acceptance speech, Dulles hammered on domestic issues—particularly what he called "the accumulation of Federal power."

Dewey appointed the 61-year-old Dulles as interim Senator until December 1. The winner of the November balloting will serve out Wagner's term which expires January 3, 1951.

Lehman's chances were enhanced by failure of the American Labor Party, New York's arm of the Progressive Party, to enter a candidate in the race. Observers feel Lehman will get most of the votes that normally would go to an ALP candidate.

In his speech Dewey said Communist elements were opposed to Dulles because he is "the architect of American foreign policy."

"The enemies of our country do not like him because he fights with two fists for peace and freedom," the Governor said. "Their agents in this State, the Communists who run the American Labor Party, have now publicly announced they will not run candidates for the Senate or the Court of Appeals, which means they are throwing their support to the Democratic candidate.

"And why? They said because Senator Dulles was the architect of American foreign policy. We proudly accept the challenge from these Red totalitarians."

Remember '47, Truman Tells Jubilant GOP

President Truman yesterday reminded exultant Republicans that they had been misled by political victories in 1947.

He was asked at a news conference to comment on the election of John P. Saylor, Republican, over Mrs. Robert L. Coffey, sr., Democrat, in a special election in Pennsylvania to fill a House of Representatives vacancy.

Mr. Truman recalled that, back in 1947, there were some barometers like that, but they didn't work out.

Apparently, he was referring to the special election in Pennsylvania that year in which Franklin H. Lichtenwalter won a House seat in a contest with Phil Storch, a Democrat backed by labor.

Carroll Reese, then chairman of the Republican National Committee, said that Lichtenwalter's victory was a signal that the voters would throw out the Truman Administration in 1948.

Group Accepts FEPC Bill

By The Associated Press

A Senate Labor Subcommittee yesterday approved a bill to set up a Federal Fair Employment Practices Commission.

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.), said the bill will be taken up today by the full Senate Labor Committee. He added that he hopes to get a Senate vote on it this session.

The subcommittee vote was 2-1.

Europe to Share In Dollar Easing

tries have no need at the moment of buying wheat in Canada with recovery funds, and therefore will not share in the concession just made to the British.

Countries that have important merchant fleets -- mainly The Netherlands, Norway, Italy and Greece—will, however benefit substantially from the ECA decision to pay for ships' disbursements in this country.

Two other areas of probable benefit to the ECA countries were mentioned in the statement that followed Schuman's meeting with the American officials.

One was the buying of strategic materials for stockpiling in the United States. The United States promised the British last Monday that it would "review" its stockpiling program, with the idea of buying more rubber, tin and other materials from British Empire countries. The United States presumably will extend its "review" now to rubber and tin from the Netherlands East Indies.

To Simplify Customs Rules

The other was the field of customs regulations. In the talks with the British and the Canadians, American officials agreed to simplify existing American customs procedures by going to Congress if necessary. Yesterday's statement was an assurance that any improvement would, of course, benefit continental European as well as British goods.

The statement went on to say that in the talk with Schuman "special attention was given to the important and urgent problem of the liberalization of trade and payments within Europe." It told of the "common desire" of the French and American officials "that none of the problems which fall within the area of competence of the O. E. E. C. be dealt with outside that organization."

Makes Fund Divisions

The O. E. E. C., the "Organization for European Economic Cooperation" in Paris, is the agency of the Marshall Plan countries of Europe. It divides Marshall Plan funds among the European claimants—subject to final approval from Washington—and administers the payments scheme under which member nations make their own currencies available to one another.

French officials regarded the statement as a timely boost for the authority of the O. E. E. C., and as a sign that the United States Government was still firmly behind it.

Schuman, who arrived in Washington yesterday morning, plans to fly today to Midland, Ontario, to dedicate a memorial to the explorer, Pere Marquette. He will be back in Washington Saturday for a meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the Atlantic Pact countries.

Woman and Gun Repel Grocery Holdup Men

Atlanta, Sept. 15 (AP).—Two armed men walked into Mrs. M. R. Jackson's grocery and said: "This is a holdup, lady, be careful."

Mrs. Jackson, just on the verge of closing late last night, retorted: "God will take care of me" and grabbed for the gun. Both bandits, one armed with a knife, fled. One escaped down an alley but the other was shot in the leg.

Ghost Story . . .

MRS. ANGELINA FARINA — Alleged ghost-chaser

MRS. MARY SANFELIPPO — Paid to keep spirits away

Arrested in a raid on her house in Milwaukee, Mrs. Angelina Farina, 49, was charged with operating a confidence game. Mrs. Mary Sanfelippo, a 61-year-old Italian immigrant, and her daughter, Rose, 32, accused the soothsayer of demanding $50 to $300-a-week payments to keep ghosts from driving their family insane. The mother and daughter told police they had slaved 18 years to keep up the payments, which totaled $50,000. They said the money they earned from operating a tavern ran out in August ular printing. It was predicted that new methods could be developed to produce engraved plates within five minutes or less, ready to go to press.

The machine, as yet unnamed, is the invention in cooperative work of two French engineers, Rene A. Higonnet and Louis Moyroud, the Lithomat Corp. of Cambridge, and Dr. Vannevar Bush and associates in the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Formation of the Graphic Arts Research Foundation, Inc., a unique organization to spur research in the whole printing industry, was announced at the same time. It has taken over development of new photo-composing machine. It is supported by 139 leading concerns in the newspaper, book publishing and manufacturing, lithographic, magazine, trade composition and printing plant fields.

Present methods of printing are obsolete, and on the way out, declared Dr. Bush, president of Carnegie Institution and a director of the new foundation. The world famous scientist headed the Office of Scientific Research and Development during the war.

"Some day, we may do printing without any metal whatsoever," Dr. Bush declared.

This new method, he said, can reduce costs and time in printing to bring a huge expansion in dissemination of knowledge. He said scientific research is hampered today by the inability to print many research findings and inform other workers of what has already been done.

PBA Contract Let For New Bethesda Hospital Project

A contract for the Government's combined clinical research center and hospital at Bethesda yesterday was awarded John McShain, Inc., of Philadelphia, by the Public Buildings Administration.

The firm's bid, $16,814,200, was the lowest submitted, according to PBA Commissioner W. E. Reynolds, who awarded the contract. It is for the superstructure of the proposed 40-million dollar project.

According to Reynolds, the firm has estimated it will complete its work in 900 calendar days. The 14-story building will be 182 feet tall, 779 feet long, and 358 feet wide. Its 1,350,000 square feet will make it one of the largest buildings in this area.

pressed its thanks to Yugoslavia.

That Marshal Tito, on his visit to Hungary in December, 1947, according to the Hungarian publications themselves, was to sign a treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance. The Hungarian indictment against Rajk charges Tito came to establish contacts with Rajk.

That "a representative of the Czechoslovak government" tried to intervene with Yugoslavia "for the purpose of obstructing the conclusion" of the treaty with Hungary.

Meanwhile, the Cominform's first visible work in this capital of Yugoslavia — the well-organized distribution of newspapers, posters and leaflets calling for the overthrow of Tito, was received calmly.

People Seem Calm

Government officials refused to comment, but it was understood they were unruffled.

The populace of Belgrade apparently jutified this confidence by paying little or no attention to the name-calling propaganda.

Moreover, the incident emphasized Yugoslav charges that the Kremlin is interfering in the internal affairs of smaller countries.

Meanwhile, a People's Court at Novi Sad sentenced Peter Husta, said to be the leader of "a Hungarian spy ring" in Yugoslavia, to 18 years' imprisonment at hard labor. Eight others were given terms ranging from three to 15 years. The nine, all of Hungarian birth, were accused of smuggling literature into Yugoslavia on orders from the Hungarian government.

Reds Say U. S. in Chaos

London, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda, quoted by Radio Moscow, said today that the United States is sinking into economic and political chaos and dragging the Marshall Plan countries of western Europe with her.

Montgomery to Visit U. S. in November

London, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Informed quarters said tonight that Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of Western Union defense committee, will sail for the United States November 16 aboard the liner Queen Mary.

He is expected to meet with American defense chiefs, and has tentatively scheduled an address before the English Speaking Union in New York, it was said. Montgomery is expected to return to Britain early in December.

Auto Finance Men Oppose FTC Rules

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday held a conference of auto finance representatives only to find a rebellion on its hands.

At the end of a long discussion of FTC's proposals for eliminating alleged financing practices which gyp the auto buyer, several participants tried to have the industry representatives take a vote on whether FTC should establish any trade practices rules at all.

But Barnett Watson, FTC attorney who was presiding, ruled that no votes could be taken. At this William L. Mallon, representing the National Automobile Dealers Association, said yesterday's meeting was the "first FTC conference I've attended where the privilege of expressing the pros and cons is not permitted." He conceded that everyone present had been given ample opportunity to be heard, however.

Refuses to Permit Vote

Another participant demanding a vote on leaving all regulation of auto financing up to the States was Frank Cain, counsel for the Texas Used Car Dealers Association. But Watson stood firm in refusing to permit a vote. Some speakers hinted about a rump meeting after the session adjourned but they did nothing about it.

During the day-long meeting at the Commerce Department auditorium, the 200 industry representatives heard Acting FTC Chairman Lowell Mason declare FTC "just doesn't like sales transactions clouded with deceit." He promised "vigorous prosecution."

Mason was referring to hidden finance charges in time-payment sales about which FTC has received complaints. FTC is proposing a set of so-called "fair trade" rules which would require the dealer to give each car buyer an itemized account of all charges, including insurance, and a breakdown on finance charges and accessory extras.

One speaker yesterday said about 30 per cent of auto sales would be affected by such rulings. Others pointed out that many States recently have legislated on the subject.

Opposes Proposals

Mallon at one point questioned whether such FTC regulations could be enforced voluntarily. Cain called the proposals "impossible to enforce, needless, prohibitive in cost to the Government and dealer and a way to penalize law abiding dealers."

Approval of the proposals came from Victor Nyberg, president of the Association of Better Business Bureaus. He offered a proposal which would forbid a dealer to "conceal a material act" concerning finance or other charges. His proposal was denounced by several auto finance men and one demanded it be expunged from the record. No vote was taken.

The FTC also was supported by Charles C. Collins, general counsel of the American Automobile Association.

Oyster Season Opens Quietly arrival of the 1949 season were a Post reporter and photographer who recalled last year's excitement.

They boarded the 50-foot, twin-engine patrol boat, commanded by Capt. F. Chester Cullison is in charge of all four boats in the Maryland oyster fleet assigned to the Potomac.

Last year, one of his boat crew fired 11 .45-caliber shots at a Virginia dredger on the eve of the season.

Tells of Violations

This was necessary, said the inspector, because the Virginian violated the law in several ways:

He was dredging, he was dredging at night, he was dreding on the eve of the season's official opening and he attempted (and made) a getaway.

"There won't be any drudgin' tonight," said Cullison, glancing upward at a jet-black sky. "Weather's too bad."

"Besides," Cullison was saying as he peered from the wheelhouse, "the word has gotten around."

Th word, it developed, was a rumor among Maryland oystermen that the FBI had boarded the Tiny Lou. And, it was said, the word gets across to the Virginia side of the Potomac with electrifying rapidity.

New Rabbi Chosen, for Beth Israel

Appointment of Rabbi Gedaliah Rosenthal as spiritual leader of Congregation Beth Israel, 4008 Minnesota ave. ne., was announced yesterday by Aaron Sabghir, president of the congregation.

Rabbi Rosenthal

Rabbi Rosenthal will succeed Rabbi Ephraim S. Greenberg, who left the Washington synagogue September 1 to become rabbi of a congregation in Revere, Mass.

Rabbi Rosenthal will begin his work here with the beginning of the High Holy Days, and will conduct Rosh Hashonoh services on Friday, September 23.

The new rabbi is a native Washingtonian, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Rosenthal of 484 Maryland ave. sw. He is the grandson of the late Rabbi Moses A. Horwitz, for 23 years spiritual leader of Southwest Talmud Torah and for many years dean of Washington rabbis.

Rabbi Rosenthal was ordained at Ner Israel Rabbinical College in Baltimore and was graduated last June from Johns Hopkins University.

During 1947 he served as educational director of Shaarei Zion Religious School in Baltimore and since 1948 has been editor of Tzeerainu, League of Youth magazine.

Man, 42, Held In Assault on Wife's Mother

William Frank Tydings, 42-year-old engineer, yesterday was held under $20,000 bond in Municipal Court on a charge of assaulting his 72-year-old mother-in-law with intent to kill.

His case was continued to October 15. The mother-in-law, Mrs. Elnore Aull, is reported to be in critical condition at Georgetown Hospital, where she was admitted with face and head lacerations and a possible fracture of the hip.

According to police, Tydings attacked both his wife, Ruth, 42, and her mother during a family squabble Wednesday night in their home at 5430 Carolina pl. nw.

Mrs. Tydings said he first attacked them with a knife and ice pick, then beat them after she wrested the weapons away from him, according to police. Mrs. Tydings was treated at Georgetown Hospital for multiple lacerations and released.

Police said they went to the Tydings' home on the complaint of neighbors.

Gold Price Study By Fund Proposed

By John Scali
Associated Press Reporter

A study of the hot question of the price of gold was unanimously recommended yesterday by the committee on gold of the International Monetary Fund.

The Fund's board of directors is expected to approve the plan at the board's closing session today.

The plan is a compromise which ended an angry row, temporarily at least. Gold-producing South Africa sought a general increase in the price, now set by the United States Treasury at $35 an ounce, a figure recognized by the Fund United States Secretary of the Treasury Snyder strongly opposed an increase.

Snyder offered the compromise approved yesterday. It calls for an inquiry by the Fund's executive directors into:

1. An earlier South African proposal that half of all newly mined gold be sold without a price ceiling.

2. All other "relevant considerations." Thus the study could be broadened, if the executive directors desire, to include the question of a price increase for all gold.

The compromise apparently averted angry discord at today's final, joint session of the Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

At a session of the 48-nation World Bank's board of governors yesterday, Czechoslovakia bitterly criticized the bank's lending policies, saying political factors are guiding loans to member countries.

Pavel Eisler, Czech government spokesman, made the attack. He is chief economic advisor to President Klement Gottwald of Czechoslovakia.

Reporters Are Barred

Reporters were barred from the board's session but a thoroughly informed diplomatic official gave this account of what happened:

Speaking before nearly a score of foreign finance ministers, Eisler charged that the bank has failed in its announced policy of aiding reconstruction in war-devastated countries.

He demanded to know why the bank has yet to act on a Czech government application for a loan which was submitted 16 months ago.

The Czech request, he said, is based on sound economic grounds and his country should be able to qualify for part of the bank's eight billion dollars in resources.

Collison Wins His Dismissal Appeal But Loses Job

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 15 (AP).—Charles H. Collison won his appeal before a military government grievance board today—but still lost his job.

Collison, a New York lawyer, had appealed against his dismissal last May as deputy chief of the military government decartelization branch in Germany.

He charged he was fired by his chief, Richardson Bronson, because he had testified before an investigating committee that the decartelization branch was moving too slowly in breaking up German trusts and monopolies.

Today Collison was told the grievance board had recommended his reinstatement. But John J. McCloy U. S. High Commissioner, said he could not reinstate Collison because the decartelization branch was being reduced and reorganized.

Bolivia Revolt's Leaders Flee

La Paz, Sept. 15 (AP).—Loyalist forces broke the back of the Bolivian revolution today.

One of the rebels' last three strongholds, Camiri, fell to an attack from without. The other, Santa Cruz, fell to an attack from within.

Government sources said they expected resistance at the third center, the town of Yacuiba on the Argentine frontier, to collapse within 48 hours.

The high brass of the rebels fled by air.

Acting President Mamerto Urriolagoitia said the revolt, launched August 27 by leaders of the Rightist National Revolutionary Movement (MNR), "can be called ended."

A prison delivery of hundreds of Loyalists jailed by the rebels opened the way for a counterrevolution at Santa Cruz, a military and air center in the heart of Bolivia 350 miles southeast of La Paz.

Minton Appointed For Supreme Court

on the Circuit Court. Lindley, a Republican, was named to the bench by President Harding in 1922.

Casper Platt Named

Casper Platt, Illinois State circuit judge, to succeed Lindley as a Federal district judge.

Ernest W. Gibson, former United States Senator, now serving his second two-year term as Governor of Vermont, to be a Federal district judge for Vermont. His present term as Governor does not expire until January, 1951.

President Truman and Justice-designate Minton both were elected to the Senate in the same year—1934. They occupied seats 93 and 92, respectively, in a freshman's row in the back of the chamber on the Democratic side. Nearby sat two other newscomers, the late Lewis B. Schwellenbach of Washington and the late Nathan L. Bachman of Tennessee.

Became Close Friends

The four men became close friends. Later on, as President, Mr. Truman made Schwellenbach Secretary of Labor, a post he held until his death last year. Before Schwellenbach's health failed, there was talk that he was in line for a Supreme Court appointment.

The early careers of Mr. Truman and Minton were alike in some respects.

Born October 20, 1890, on a farm in Floyd County, a part of the "knob" district of southern Indiana, Minton began earning his own way at the age of 12. He worked part time during his elementary and high school days, and acquired enough money to go to Indiana University.

He was a crack athlete at the university, starring as a slugging outfielder on the baseball team and as a powerful guard on the football team. He also won honors as a student.

He was the No. 1 man of the class that was graduated from the university law school in 1915—a class that included Paul V. McNutt and Wendell Willkie. As a consequence, Minton went to the Yale School of Law for one year on a scholarship.

Minton studied at Yale under William Howard Taft, who had served as President and who later was to be made Chief Justice of the United States.

In this connection, a Minton anecdote was reported yesterday from New Albany, Ind., by the United Press. On one occasion, according to the story, Minton took exception to Mr. Taft's explanation of a law. The two argued heatedly until Mr. Taft interrupted to say:

"I'm afraid, Mr. Minton, that if you don't like the way this law has been interpreted you will have to get on the Supreme Court and change it."

Was Captain of Infantry

Minton left Yale with the degree of master of laws after winning the Wayland prize. His thesis for the degree, dealing with constitutional law, was adjudged one of the best ever written at the university. While he was at New Haven, Minton helped found the Yale University Legal Aid Society for the Poor.

He had hardly put out his shingle in New Albany when the United States got into World War I. He enrolled in the first officers training school at Fort Benjamin Harrison and won a commission.

Minton, a Protestant, married Gertrude Gurtz, a Catholic, that same year.

He went overseas afterward as a captain of infantry and served on the Soissons, Belgian and Verdun fronts. After the Armistice he served with the headquarters company of the Thirty-third Division with the Army of Occupation in Germany. He was discharged from the Army in August, 1919.

Campaigned for McNutt

Minton returned to his law practice in New Albany and commenced to flirt with politics. Twice he sought the nomination to Congress, but without success. In 1932 he campaigned for McNutt, a fellow American Legionnaire, and when McNutt became Governor he named him public counselor for the public service commission. Here Minton made good. He was credited with having reduced public utility rates in Indiana by $3,200,000 in a little more than a year.

In 1934 Minton won the Democratic nomination for Senator, and went after the Republican incumbent, Senator Arthur R. Robinson, a severe critic of the New Deal, who had been a fellow officer in the Eighty-fourth Division.

The late Mark Thistlethwaite, Washington correspondent for the Indianapolis News, wrote a special article for The Washington Post after Minton had beaten Robinson by a majority approaching 60,000.

"Conservative by Nature"

He said of Minton:

"A conservative by nature and training, he defended the New Deal with an ardor that carried conviction . . . He placed human rights above the rights of property and wealth, stressing the need of social readjustments to promote justice . . . "

In campaigning against Robinson, who denounced the New Deal as socialistic and called for a return to constitutional government, Minton made what the Republicans regarded as a slip.

"You can't offer a hungry man the Constitution," Minton shouted. "You can't say to a man hunting a job, 'Here, have a Constitution.' You can't expect the Constitution to take the place of food, fuel and raiment."

Insisted On Flexibility

Under Republican fire thereafter, Minton insisted that the Constitution was a flexible and not a rigid document.

After the election, the late Senator William E. Borah of Idaho stopped off in Chicago on his way to Washington. Reporters asked him what he thought of the Republican defense of the Constitution as a political issue. The Lion of Idaho made the brusque reply: "You can't eat the Constitution."

Minton came to Washington with the avowed intention of voting "aye" on the bills that President Roosevelt wanted and "no" on those he opposed. He soon became a White House favorite.

Favored Curb on Court

In 1936 Minton spoke before the Federal Bar Association at the Mayflower here, and proposed that the power of the Supreme Court to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional be limited. He suggested that a 5-to-4 vote of the Court was not enough to upset the judgment of Congress and the President, and said it ought to be made mandatory for seven of the nine justices to agree before an act of Congress was invalidated.

In fighting for Mr. Roosevelt's abortive Court reorganization or "packing" bill in 1937, Minton said that the Court had "not been in step with the times."

"Certain members of that branch," he said, "have in their minds a fixation on certain fundamental problems, and nothing seems able to change it. The Supreme Court is setting itself up as a super-legislature There is no place the people may turn for redress of judicial abuse of power unless they turn to Congress."

Defeated in 1940

Minton was defeated for reelection in 1940 by Raymond E. Willis, a Republican. He served thereafter as an "anonymous" administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, acting as liaison between the White House and the Capitol. After about five months of this, Mr. Roosevelt named him to the judgeship he now holds.

Attorneys who have watched Minton on the bench say that, while he remains liberal-minded, he has shown a balanced julgment that is in sharp contrast to his errlier attitude as a red-hot New Dealer.

Reaction in the Senate to Minton's appointment appeared to be favorable.

Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.), a member of the Judiciary Committee which will pass on the nomination, said:

"A splendid appointment. His entire record shows that he has been a friend of the man who works for a living."

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said that Minton was a man of high character and ideals and a very good lawyer. He added::

"His philosophy while he was in the Senate was that of a progressive. The fact that the President went to the judiciary to find a capable appointee will, I think, meet with approval, both in Congress and out."

Minton's nickname of "Shay" goes back to his boyhood. His younger brother, Rosco, was not able to pronounce Sherman, and when he tried to it came out "Shay." That nickname followed the justice-designate through school, to France, and into the Senate.

Rosco Minton, who is with a packing company in Fort Worth, Tex., said that Sherman called him on the telephone Wednesday and told him he was going to get the Supreme Court appointment.

He said his brother, a few days earlier, didn't think he would get the nomination because of his health. He explained that Sherman suffered a heart attack three years ago, but has recovered and is now in good health.

Rosco said that his distinguished brother is a nondrinker and nonsmoker.

"But he cusses just like me," Rosco chuckled.

McCarran Acting On Own in Spain, Truman Declares

President Truman said sharply yesterday that Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee is acting on his own in going to Spain to talk with Generalissimo Franco about diplomatic recognition by the United States.

McCarran sailed from New York yesterday. He said he would visit Franco not only to discuss diplomatic recognition but to talk over the possibility of a loan to Spain.

Mr. Truman said McCarran is not representing this Government in any way, and has no authority to commit the United States to anything.

Man Loses Appendix By Accidental Gunshot

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Wayne Bacon won't have to worry about having his appendix out, doctors at General Hospital said today. He did the job himself by accident with a .22 caliber revolver. Physicians said the healthy appendix was snipped off "almost as well as if it were a professional job." Bacon, shot Tuesday while cleaning the weapon at his home, suffered other internal injuries.

'Q Fever' Is Now Traced to Dog Tick

The organism of "Q fever," mysterious pneumonia-like malady, has been recovered successfully for the first time from common brown dog ticks, it was reported yesterday.

Significance of the discovery, however, is not immediately apparent, it was explained, since the infection in man has been traced largely to meat-animal contacts and to raw milk.

The tick, known as the kennel tick, is not known to infest cattle, parasitologists said.

Found In Arizona

The disease organism was reported recovered from 18 ticks taken from a dog in Phoenix, Ariz., by Dr. Ralph R. Parker, pioneer researcher in Rocky Mountain spotted fever who died September 5, and his veterinarian assistant, Oscar Sussman, at the National Institutes of Health's Rocky Mountain Laboratory, Hamilton, Mont.

The findings were published in the current issue of Public Health Reports, publication of the United States Public Health Service. They resulted from laboratory studies of various species of ticks to determine the disease-carrying dangers of ticks.

Prevalent In Balkans

Q fever, virtually unknown in the United States until 12 years ago, infects the respiratory system, causing such symptoms as headache, chills and fever, heavy sweating, and an intense ache in the bones. More prevalent in the Balkans, it is known there as "Balkan grippe."

It was still a medical rarity in the United States in 1940 when an outbreak at the National Institutes of Health, in Bethesda, Md., made 25 workers ill. All recovered.

More recently, areas in southern California nave reported numerous cases of Q fever in humans, mostly meatpackers and meat handlers and persons suspected of getting the infection from raw milk.

Doctor Claims Cure for Some Tissue Diseases

Los Angeles, Sept. 15 (AP).—An authority on glandular secretions (steroids) announces a cure for certain phases of polio, rheumatic fever, arthritis, gout and other maladies of the connective tissues.

Dr. Harvey Billig, jr., head of wartime research on steroids for the Navy at the California Institute of Technology, told the Southern California section of International College of Surgeons yesterday that he had accomplished cures in some thousands of cases.

The treatment, he said, is by injecting the glandular secretions into the muscles, and the connective tissues maladies "can be cured with dramatic suddenness."

Glands Inhibited

Maladies such as polio, he explained, in addition to destroying nerve tissue, inhibit steroid production by a toxic effect on the secreting glands.

In New York, however, Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said: "There is not yet available any established scientific evidence to support these claims."

Dr. Billig, a fellow of the International College of Surgeons, said the glands include the adrenal cortex, the ovaries and the testes, under the guiding influence of the pituitary gland. The reduced glandular production results in contraction of ligaments, he added.

Ligaments Relaxed

The consequence is deformities commonly resulting from infantile paralysis and arthritis, the physician said.

Steroid injections, he added, cause the ligaments to relax. He said that when the treatment is used in the first stages of the maladies, they work seeming miracles.

Dr. Billig is assistant professor of orthopedics at the College of Medical Evangelists and is on the staffs of three hospitals.

New Yorker to Direct McCloy Intelligence

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 15 (AP).—Benjamin P. Shute, 38, New York lawyer, was appointed today director of intelligence for John J. McCloy, United States High Commissioner in Germany.

In this post, Shute will be a sort of "watchdog" over the new German republic.

The Gallup Poll

79% Favor Using T-H Injunction Law

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 15.—The injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley Act is approved by an overwhelming majority of all voters, including labor union members, questioned in a survey conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Approximately three out of every four labor union members and about eight out of every 10 voters in the survey indicated approval of the principle to allow the Government to issue an injunction to prevent a strike in industries considered vital to the country's welfare while settlements are attempted.

Although greater approval comes from Republicans, Democrats also are substantially in favor of the law.

Just before Missouri Pacific trains chugged to a halt last Friday, President Truman said that the Government had exhausted nearly all of its authority in the dispute. The strike, called by 5000 engineers and other key operating employes of the Nation's ninth largest rail system, raises again the question of the place of the injunction in labor disputes.

The present Taft-Hartley law gives the Government the right to use injunctions to halt strikes in certain instances. The Administration's proposed labor law would not continue this right.

In testing attitudes toward the injunction principle, the Institute put this question to a carefully distributed cross-section of the voting population:

"If there is a strike in a public service industry—like gas and electric light companies, telephone companies, or railroads—do you think the Government in Washington should or should not be allowed to issue an injunction—that is, a court order to prevent the strike for a period while it can be discussed?"

Should	79%
Should not	11
No opinion	10

Crippling strikes that threaten the Nation's economy are anathema to the public. They believe such strikes should be stopped whatever the legislative mechanism may be. Today's survey shows approval of Government use of the injunction as a means to achieve the end result.

Manual workers and members of labor unions are somewhat less inclined to favor the injunction principle than are other occupation groups as shown in the following table:

	Should	Should Not	No Opin.
Union Members	74%	18%	8%
Prof. & Business	86	9	5
White-Collar	85	9	6
Farmers	79	10	11
Manual Workers	75	13	12

Although strikes of any kind are seldom popular with the public, previous Institute surveys have shown that the public believes in unions and a majority approves of the basic principle of labor's right to strike.

One thing the public does not approve, however, is the idea of Government unemployment benefits being paid to men who go on strike.

The issue was put to voters in the Institute's survey as follows:

"Do you think Government unemployment benefits should or should not be paid to men who go on strike?"

Should	21%
Should not	68
No opinion	11

Weismuller Diets Self Back Into Job

Hollywood, Sept. 15 (AP).—Johnny Weismuller, who ate himself out of his Tarzan role, has dieted himself back into jungle movies.

He weighed in yesterday at Columbia studio at 199½ and will begin work as "Jungle Jim," a sort of Tarzan-with-clothes-on role. A clause in his contract stipulates that he must pay Producer Sam Katzman $1000 for each pound of weight over 200.

The swimming star lost his Tarzan role when he gained up to a paunchy 238.

Divorce Law Change Voted by Church Unit

Halifax, Sept. 15 (AP).—The lower house of the Church of England in Canada yesterday voted 92-76 to allow the innocent party in divorce to remarry and retain the services and sacraments of the church.

The proposed legislation, which needs concurrence from the House of Bishops before becoming church law, also calls for establishment of church courts to decide "which, if either," is the innocent party.

Hull, Quebec, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Paul Emile Durocher, inventor, who had hoped to make millions with a "miracle carburetor," was brought here penniless today to face charges of obtaining $7000 under false pretences.

Durocher, who attracted attention when he claimed his carburetor would give motorists 176 miles on the gallon, was arrested in Montreal.

Letter Carrier Jailed For Discarding Mail

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 15 (U.P.). A young rural letter carrier was in jail today because, an indictment charged, he got too tired to make his rounds each day.

Thomas W. Warner, jr., of West Memphis, was accused of tossing the letters, magazines and parcels into a garbarge can instead of delivering them to mail boxes on his route.

Case of Beserk Killer Goes to Grand Jury Next Week

Camden, N. J., Sept. 15 (AP).—The Unruh case will be presented to a Camden County grand jury September 22, Prosecutor Mitchell H. Cohen announced.

Howard B. Unruh is the 28-year-old war veteran who slaughtered 13 persons along a Camden street September 6. He is undergoing mental tests at the New Jersey State Hospital in Trenton.

Cohen said he will bring only a few eyewitnesses of the shooting before the jury. Dr. R. Deen Cavalli, Camden County physician, also will testify.

The prosecutor said the jurors will receive a stenographic transcription of verbal statements made by the killer in which he gave his own version of the street massacre, worst mass killing in the Nation's history.

Beyond that, Cohen would make no statement. He has said before that if mental experts adjudge Unruh insane, he never will be brought to trial.

The prosecutor told reporters he would turn over to the psychiatrists examining Unruh notes and other papers found in the former GI's home.

On some of the papers, Cohen said, Unruh listed his grudges against some of the neighbors he killed.

The report of the psychiatrists is not expected to be completed before next month.

Vandenberg Urges Swift Unity in West Europe

tions overseas will be the first to recognize this act because your nations have incomparably demonstrated your love of your own independence, no matter what the cost in blood and sweat and tears."

Vandenberg told the European editors that "our partnership is based upon self-help and mutual aid. That requires the earliest possible self-sufficiency within each of your magnificent nations by your own courageously effective work and efforts.

"It inevitably means the swiftest, maximum gearing of all these Western European efforts, each with the other, on your own enlightened initiative."

Vandenberg, who said the West was winning the "Cold War" and that "the momentum of peace is in high gear," said he had pride in the record the United States has "written into the annals of humane history, and I have no fears that it will suffer from any of the self-serving libels flung at its motives by angry, alien critics who have been thwarted by these policies and who have good reason to know exactly why they are mad."

The Michigan Senator recalled Senate votes on recent major foreign policy matters and emergency aid programs and said these majority votes reflected "our general and very deep conviction" that the free world must work together for its "common interest in collective peace" and to stop another war before it starts.

"There is a powerful consistency in these attitudes," he said. "They are basic attitudes."

The majorities asserted, "and I believe they still assert our general and very deep conviction that the free world must work together for its common interest in collective peace and that no other character of peace can be dependable in this foreshortened world," he said.

He added that the majority votes "asserted—and still assert—our relentless purpose to stop another war before it starts, and to avoid appeasements, which as I have said before, are but surrender on the installment plan.

"I believe they asserted—and still assert—our disposition to render every rational, economic aid within our prudent power, not as a matter of charity but as a matter of intelligent self-interest, to help build a sound as well as a peaceful society in which the hopes of men may thrive."

"We are joined together in a crusade for honorable peace. We grip friendly hands across the sea. We have no enemies unless aggressors nominate themselves as such. Our common cause is human rights and fundamental liberties in a free world of free men," he said.

The speech is probably the last major one Vandenberg will give before entering a hospital for a physical checkup that may lead to a major operation. He plans to remain in Washington only until the Senate has acted on the global military aid program.

Vandenberg received a standing ovation, as did General Marshall and General Donovan later in the evening.

A primitive Danish stone battle ax and an Irish walking stick were among the gifts presented to General Marshall by representatives of each nation among the foreign newsmen.

Dr. Kornelius Duowe Bosch of Holland, speaking for the group, praised the former Secretary of State "for what you have done to foster recovery of Europe."

Columnist Walter Lippman, in behalf of the Overseas Writers, presided at the presentation of a silver bowl to Donovan and a silver plate to Martin.

Lippmann, recalling the death of Polk, said it was "believed to be the first time an American correspondent abroad was ever murdered for political reasons"

It was, he said, "a challenge which free journalists were bound to take up," and though the man who led Polk into a trap has been sentenced to life imprisonment, the case "is not closed until the actual murderers have been caught."

Lippmann told Donovan, a Medal of Honor winner, "your sense of justice is equal to your courage."

Donovan headed without pay the investigation for which Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, headed a committee which raised approximately $50,000.

A. P. Wadsworth of the Manchester (England) Guardian also spoke at the program, for which Paul Wooton, treasurer of Overseas Writers, was chairman in the absence of President Ernest Lindley, who is ill.

The foreign newsmen, who arrived in Washington Wednesday evening, attended a regular White House press conference earlier in the day. Also present for the White House conference was Senor Tito Castillo, editor of El Mercurio Antifigasto, of Santiago, Chile. The newsmen will leave this morning.

Triple Traffic Control Ready

A new system of traffic control will start Monday noon along Lee hwy. from the Key Bridge to N. Highland st., the State Traffic Department announced yesterday.

Separate traffic lights over each of the road's three lanes have been installed at nine intersections on the heavily traveled artery, to allow reversal of center-lane traffic during rush hours.

During morning rush hours, from 7 to 9 a. m., two of the three lanes will be reserved for Washington-bound traffic.

The motorist traveling out of the city will be confronted by a double-eyed red light, dangling over the center lane, and warning him to use only the single right-hand lane.

During evening rush hours from 4 to 6 p. m., the process will be reversed.

In between rush hours, a flashing yellow "caution" indicator will allow traffic going either way to use the center lane on the 1.5 mile stretch when possible.

The new system, with lights arranged progressively to keep traffic moving, is expected to ease congestion considerably on the highway, which is reported to bear the second heaviest traffic load in the State.

Motorists traveling under the 30-mile speed limit should be able to avoid red lights in most cases, according to Associate State Traffic Engineer M. M. Todd.

The new staggered lane arrangement, integrated with intersection lights, is unique in the State, and possibly in the Nation, Todd said.

Reception at Italian Embassy Honors Count, Countess Sforza

The Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani held a reception yesterday at the embassy in honor of their Foreign Minister, Count Carlo Sforza, and Countess Sforza, and their Minister of Finance, G. Pella.

Among the 1000 or more who attended were the many statesmen who are now in Washington for the Monetary Conference and the Atlantic Pact meeting.

One of the original signators of the Pact, Dr. Jose Caeiro da Mata, Foreign Minister of Portugal, came escorted by the Portuguese Ambassador, Pedro Theotonio Pereira. The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, and the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Edward H. Foley, jr., also were guests.

Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Military Aide to the President, attended in a dinner jacket. In the box-bordered court Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, had a chat with Stanley Woodward, Chief of Protocol. The Belgian Ambassador, Baron Silvercruys; the Ambassador of Denmark, Henrik de Kauffman, and the Prime Minister of Luxembourg, Pierre Dupong, were three distinguished stags at the party.

Diplomatic beauties were Signora Paresce, wife of the Italian attache, and Senhora de Rocheta, wife of the Portuguese Counselor. The New Zealand Ambassador and Lady Berendsen, still sunburned and rested from their South American cruise, dropped by before going on to a monetary dinner. And the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon left for a party at the Guatemalan Embassy in celebration of Guatemala's national holiday.

There were hundreds more, including the Swiss Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Fuchss, Mme. Pandit, the Ambassador of India; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, Drew Dudley of the Bank and Fund, the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Gans, Admiral and Mrs. Louis Denfeld, Mr. and Mrs. Woodlief Thomas, Miss Barbara Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Bus Stoddard of New York and the Belgian Attache and Mme. Paternotte.

Signora Tarchiani is one of Washington's most popular hostesses. Her party yesterday she purposely kept down to 1000. It was as bright and gay as many other occasions, with the added advantage that it took less time to cross the long drawing room.

Two Escape Virginia Camp

Washington police were alerted last night to watch for two prisoners who walked away yesterday from Virginia Prison Work Camp No. 13, near Woodbridge.

The two were named as Randolph Pringley, 17, and George E. Simms, 23. Reports said neither man is considered dangerous. Virginia authorities were searching for them in woods adjacent to the camp. Woodbridge is about 15 miles south of Washington, the southern terminus of the newly opened Shirley Memorial hwy.

and potatoes. The first witness on the schedule, Secretary Brannan, failed to appear.

A call to Brannan's office revealed the error. Investigation disclosed that the fault lay with Western Union, which delivered the wrong message. It was a message addressed to all speculators in eggs. The list of such traders was furnished the committee by Brannan.

Won't Be Able to Testify

The telegram Brannan should have received wasa personal one from Anderson asking Brannan if he could appear to testify on the "so-called eggs and Irish potato bill."

As a result of the mistake Brannan will not appear at all. The committee will meet again Monday, but Brannan will be in San Francisco, where he will take part in a Democratic farm meeting, similar to one in Des Moines, Iowa, in June.

Decline Seen In Subsidies For Potatoes

The cost of supporting the price of potatoes will be less than one fifth what it was last year, or about 44 million dollars, the National Potato Council predicted yesterday.

(Forty-four million dollars is about double the entire value of last year's unusually profitable Maryland tobacco crop.)

Whitney Tharin, secretary of the council, notified Senator Anderson (D., N. Mex.) of the new estimate. Tharin credited Secretary Charles F. Brannan's reduction in potato acreage and his slash in potato supports from 90 to 60 per cent of parity for this year's savings.

"Recent official figures from the Department of Agriculture," Tharin wrote, "show that as of September 10 the Government's purchases of Irish potatoes under the 60 per cent support program totaled only 6,760,000 bushels, at a cost to the Government of $7,950,000. This compares with purchases on the same date in 1948 of 28,420,000 bushels at a cost of $44,300,000.

"If this same relationship continues throughout the harvesting season, which is now in progress, the cost of the program for 1949 will approximate only 44 million dollars, or less than one fifth of last year's 225 million, when the support price was 90 percent."

Tharin pointed out that potato farmers themselves "have taken the lead in making the sharp reductions necessary." He added they had voluntarily reduced their acreage 43 percent" and "as far back as May, 1948, recommended that changes be made in the potato price support program."

Senate Confirms Quesada's Post

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Lieut. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada of the Air Force to head the joint technical planning committee of the Armed Forces.

The promotion is effective October 1. General Quesada now is head of the Air Force Reserve program.

The Senate also confirmed:

Lieut. Gen. Howard Arnold Craig, deputy chief of staff for material, to be Inspector General of the Air Force.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth Bonner Wolfe of the material division, Wright Field, Ohio, to succeed General Craig as deputy chief of staff.

De Gasperi Warns Sailors In Ship Strike

Rome, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Italian government is ready to use force if necessary to uphold its authority and defend the nation's economy against disorder, Premier Alcide de Gasperi said today.

He told a bankers' convention in Venice that he is making "a last appeal to the reasonableness" of Italian sailors who struck a week ago in a dispute over relief benefits.

De Gasperi said his regime, "to consolidate the government and to save and defend the public economy, must mediate and arbitrate." He added:

"If it is necessary at a given moment in the face of force when persuasion and reasonableness to not reach their goal, the state will not avoid its duty of using its force and its laws."

The premier's words were applauded.

They constituted a warning against an autumn strike campaign threatened by Giuseppe de Vittorio, Communist leader of Italy's General Confederation of Labor. The Italian news agency Astra reported last week Italy's industries lost 28,576,199 work hours from strikes and work stoppages in the first six months of 1949.

Italian passenger ships remained anchored in Venice, Genoa, Naples, and other ports. The only ship to sail from Italy in the week was the S.S. Atlantic.

U. S. Seeking Egg Barter

June, as provided in the present law.

"I'd hate to go back to the farmers and tell them the program was not in effect, after telling them early this year it would last until next June," he told the committee. That group, under chairmanship of Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) is studying the highly expensive egg and potato price support law. The operation of the law is expected to cost between 100 and 200 million dollars this year.

"I'd hate to be a member of the Senate who had to go back and tell his farmer constituents the law had been repealed," Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) added.

"Particularly if there were any eggs around that hadn't been properly refrigerated," suggested Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.).

Spread Not Too Great

Termohlen declared the spread between the farm price of eggs and the retail market price is not too great. During the first nine months of 1948, he said, the support price of eggs was 44.8 cents a dozen on the farms, while the national average retail price was 62.1 cents. This year the difference was 44.2 support price and 62.1 cents at retail.

"The farmers get more of the customers' dollar for eggs than for nearly any other farm product," he added.

Termohlen testified that the Eastern States produce much better eggs than the great farming Midwest. In Iowa, he said, one third of the eggs are below the top of Grade "A". In the East including New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, more than 90 percent of all eggs are top grade.

Episcopal Rector Resigns to Join Catholic Church

Providence, R. I., Sept. 15 (U.P.). A former Episcopal rector who accompanied the First Marine Division on wartime invasions in the Pacific, today announced ris conversion to the Catholic faith.

The Rev. Paul van K. Thomson, who resigned September 1 as rector of St. Stephen's (Episcopal) Church here, said he, his wife and their three children joined the Catholic Church Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Thomson's announcement was published in the Providence Visitor, weekly newspaper of the Catholic diocese.

It said the main element in his conversion was his decision that "in the Catholic Church alone can one discern the organic unity, complete catholicity, consistent historic apostolicity and the abundant supernatural sanctity which have always been the mark of the one church. . . ."

The 32-year-old clergyman, who accompanied the Marines on Okinawa and Peleliu, will join the faculty of Catholic Providence College when classes open this month.

Longshore Union Rejects Hawaii Governor's Plan

Honolulu, T. H., Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The strike strategy committee of the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union today flatly rejected Gov. Ingram Stainback's plan for ending the 138-day dock walkout.

Committee Chairman Frederick Low said the committee "can give no serious consideration to the so-called Stainback proposal to end the strike."

The Governor's plan, a version of one originally fostered by two unions closely associated with the ILWU, proposed an immediate back-to-work movement at a 14-cent hourly wage boost with further wage differences to be ironed out in negotiations. He set up a two-year contract as one of the fundamentals of the proposal.

Diesel Blast Kills Two

Threats Made To Judge, Says His Defense

Atlanta, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The defense charged today that John Lockwood repeatedly threatened to kill Judge Robert Carpenter and shared a Florida tourist cabin with Mrs. Carpenter before the jurist shot him last July 27.

Taking the offensive in the case which has produced charges of two simultaneous illicit love affairs, the defense added Carpenter to his own staff of inquisitors. The judge is on trial for assault with intent to kill Lockwood.

Hotel Operator Testifies

Carpenter questioned a hotel operator, Glenn Loudermilk, and drew from him the testimony that Lockwood had once told him he "might have to kill" the judge.

Another time, Lockwood told him to send word to Carpenter that "if you come through the door of the hotel I'm going to shoot you," Loudermilk said.

The word allegedly was carried by the hotel night club manager, Andy George, who testified earlier that he had twice overheard Lockwood threaten to slay Carpenter.

Florida Tryst Described

These threats allegedly were made in the Imperial Hotel, formerly controlled by Carpenter and his wife but lately by Lockwood, the Carpenters' old friend. The defense asserted that as a friend, Lockwood turned into a Judas.

Chief Defense Counsel Ellis Barrett announced he will complete his case Friday by placing Carpenter and his foster-daughter, Barbara, 24, on the stand.

The defense today came up with a witness who said he found Lockwood and the judge's wife together in a Florida cabin on a date preceding by some weeks their spying on Carpenter's alleged love nest.

Lockwood had testified he and Mrs. Carpenter sought to trap Carpenter and another woman at their retreat so the judge's wife would have evidence for a divorce.

Sailor Unable To Explain Flattop Fall

Rome, Sept. 15 (U.P.)—An embarrassed sailor was unable to explain today how he fell off a carrier flight deck nearly as big as a football field, but he asserted emphatically that the 12-hour swim that followed "wasn't no fun, Bud."

He said he kept on thinking about Shirley May France and her swim in the English Channel, and said to himself. "Bud, if she can keep on paddling 20 hours, so can you." He admitted his 12-hour swim in the Mediterranean was made a lot easier by the fact he was wearing a life preserver.

The seaman, Joseph Toles, 19, of the aircraft carrier Coral Sea, was fished out by the mechant ship, Executor, of the American Export Line, and taken to Genoa. He was flown to Rome today, where he was questioned by a stern-faced commander, Edgar K. Thompson, naval attache.

Big Enough for Squadron

"How, with all that deck space, big enough for a squadron of planes to land on, did you ever happen to fall off that ship?" Thompson asked the youth, who is from Rochester, Mich.

"Well, sir, I just don't know," Toles replied. "I was just walking along on that ship and all of a sudden I found myself in the water."

"Just like that?" Thompson asked, raising an eyebrow.

"Just like that, sir," he said.

"Then what did you do?"

"Well, sir, I pressed the inflating button of my Mae West life preserver and started yelling. I yelled mighty hard."

But nobody heard him. That was Tuesday night, and the crew of the Coral Sea hunted for him for hours without avail.

It was 12 hours before Toles was picked up.

Being Returned to U. S.

The Navy announced that Toles was being returned to the United States by plane on Saturday to meet the Coral Sea, now en route to the United States.

Asked privately what he thought about his long float, Toles replied:

"It wasn't no fun, Bud. I just kept paddling along out there."

Reports from Genoa quoted Toles as saying he decided to take an after-lunch nap on the deck and rolled overboard while asleep.

The young sailor had been considered lost when the Executor sighted him last night, about 62 miles from the nearest land at Cap St. Sebastion.

Bismarck's Grandson, Wife Killed in Crash

Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 15 (AP). Count Gottfried von Bismarck-Schoenhausen, 48, grandson of the "Iron Chancellor," and his 33-year-old wife, Melanie, were killed yesterday in an automobile crash, police reported today.

The count was tried by a Nazi court for alleged participation in the 1944 bomb plot against Hitler, but was acquitted. He was a brother of the present Prince of Bismarck and a former president of the Potsdam district government. Three children survive.

big chuckle from the Senators with his oblique appeal for early approval of the $4,205,850 needed to pay the retroactive salary increases to city employes.

Wilding quipped that he had received from city employes 4,205,850 inquiries about when the money was coming through. "That's an estimate," he added. The fund has cleared the House, and Senate approval is expected.

The Senate group also heard District witnesses urge restoration of hospital and child day care funds cut from the supplemental appropriation bill in the House. One fund totals $103,065.95 for the District to pay three Washington private hospitals — Children's, Casualty, and Emergency—for the cost of care they gave to indigent patients over the amount of the budget allotment for that service.

Mostly Emergency Cases

Wilding pointed out the patients served are mostly emergency cases, certified by the Health Department as being unable to pay for the care. When the budget allowances run out, he said, "the hospitals never tell the District to take care of those patients itself, they go right ahead taking care of them."

He added that the appropriation figure represented actual services the hospitals had furnished "and they should be paid for it." Hospital representatives pointed out that even when they collect the full amount due at the rates fixed by the District, they are still providing the care for indigents at a loss, in terms of their average costs per patient.

Hospital spokesmen who appeared included: James G. Capossela, administrator of Emergency Hospital; James W. Lemon, president of Children's Hospital, and Dr. Joseph Rogers Young, chief of the professional staff at Casualty Hospital.

District Welfare Director John W. Tramburg told the subcommittee four of the District's six child day care centers would probably have to be closed unless a $50,000 appropriation for them approved by the House is boosted to the $100,000 which Congress authorized for the year.

The subcommittee also heard District Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West ask $11,600 to hire an assistant corporation counsel and two secretaries to help handle the tax matters that will arise under the new revenue law.

Two Patrolmen Put on Guard At Medina Home

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Two patrolmen have been assigned to guard the home of Federal Judge Harold R. Medina, who is presiding at the Communist conspiracy trial, it was disclosed today.

One patrolman is on duty from the time Medina gets home from the Federal courthouse until midnight, and another takes over from then until about time for the judge to leave in the morning.

Police officials said the patrolmen were assigned to Medina's home, at 14 E. 75th st., as a "precautionary measure." Several weeks ago tne judge disclosed in court he had received numerous threatening letters.

Flier Asks Protection

Istanbul, Turkey, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Russian air force lieutenant landed a training plane at a Turkish airport Tuesday and asked government protection as a political refugee, it was learned today.

Jurors Find Almost No Gambling

ments which led to their investigations came from "irresponsible publicity seekers."

Resulting unfavorable publicity, the report declared, has been "unwarranted."

In an exhaustive investigation, according to the report, the jurors found some of the reports came in the form of anonymous communications or communications from "apparently nonexisent persons."

The jury said it had been unable to get any evidence to substantiate reports of improper conduct by police officials.

"At least one specific charge of certain police officials setting the stage for a fictitious raid on an alleged gambling establishment has been definitely established to be untrue," it added.

"The grand jury is not so naive as to believe that violations of the gambling laws are not occurring," the report continued. But, it said, such violations are "confined to isolated instances of a minor nature and involve no organized or widespread operations."

In view of the county's present population and its proximity to the District, the jury reported, these violations are now at "an almost irreducible minimum."

The jurors called for stiffer punishment for gambling offenders, while conceding the Police Department is "exerting every reasonable effort to keep the situation as satisfactory as it appears to be at this time."

"In connection with future prosecutions," the report said, "it occurs to the grand jury, and is therefore respectfully suggested, that upon convictions, particularly in cases involving repeating offenders, more severe punishment than appears to have been generally imposed in the past would be an added deterrant to potential gambling violators."

In proposing a State lottery, the jury said that since the State already sanctions certain forms of gambling "there is no moral turpitude involved in illegal gambling." condoned and should be eradiever, and therefore cannot be condemned and should be eradicated as far as possible," the report noted.

"The apparent impossibility of totally eradicating it, however, suggests the advisability of a very serious study and consideration of the question of a legalized State-operated lottery," the report said.

"Such legislation, which would take all private profits from illegal operations, and incidentally, divert such profit to State uses to help relieve the burden of almost unbearable existing taxation, would tend to satisfy the inherent gambling instincts of those who now patronize illegal operations."

The report was the first handed down by the jury since it was convened April 4. The group, in an unprecedented move, last June asked that it be recalled this month so it would have further time to study evidence before it.

Judge Marbury said he would ask that the report be handed to the incoming grand jury next month so there would be a "continuity" of its work.

cealed by a false cupboard. It was furnished with a semi-circular bar. The room was paneled in knotty pine. Police seized a quantity of gambling paraphernalia.

Magistrate Bowie said he had "a good idea" who were the bosses and who were the hired hands in the gambling establishment.

He fined Sussman and Shapiro $500 each on charges of operating a lottery, and Olewack and Raynor $300 each on the same charge. Each man also was given a suspended sentence of six months in the Maryland House of Correction on charges of bookmaking.

Charge Thrown Out

Mr. and Mrs. Burgee, owners of the home where the raid was made, pleaded guilty to permitting gambling. Burgee was fined $500 and his wife was given a suspended fine of $300.

Hartman testified that he was present at the time of the raid because he had gone there to try and sell office equipment to Sussman. The latter substantiated this and Magistrate Bowie threw out the charge against Hartman.

Also pleading guilty to charges of operating a lottery and bookmaking were Philip S. Conti, 34, of 1346 Kennedy st. nw.; Abe Morris Mason, 28, of 2003 Patterson rd., Brookside Manor, Md.; Sam Flahowitz, 44, of 2807 63d ave., Cheverly, Md., and Joseph Flahowitz, 38, of 514 Dormer ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Conti and Mason were arrested May 5 in Conti's residence on Patterson rd. The Flahowitz brothers were arrested June 9 at the 63rd ave. address in Cheverly.

Conti, Mason and Sam Flahowitz were fined $500 each and Joseph Flahowitz $300 on the lottery charges. Each man also was given a suspended six month sentence in the House of Correction on the bookmaking charges.

Tax Lien Notices Filed Against Two Firms Here

Tax lien notices were filed yesterday in District Court against a Washington liquor dealer and the owner of an export-import firm.

The notices, filed by the Collector of Internal Revenue in Baltimore, named Jacob D. Rubin, liquor dealer of 4901 5th st. nw., as owing $5983 on his 1946 income, and Gerald M. Lambert, of 3400 Rodman st. nw., who runs an export-import concern, as owing $4703 on his 1947 income.

Both men said they had not been notified that the lien notices were to be filed and that their lawyers will contact the Internal Revenue Bureau, to straighten out the matter.

Residents to Get Hearing Soon on Cleanup Program

The Commissioners decided yesterday to call a public hearing soon for owners and tenants of dwellings in their slum cleanup experimental block.

More than two months ago the city heads selected the downtown block—bounded by U, V and 17th sts. and Florida ave. nw.—to try out a rehabilitation program similar to the so-called Baltimore plan.

The public hearing, suggested by Assistant Health Engineering Officer E. M. Dulin, would serve to induce owner-tenant cooperation in the cleanup venture, it was pointed out.

New Justice

President Truman deserves a good deal of credit for going to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for a judge to succeed Justice Rutledge on the supreme bench. It is true, of course, that the new appointee, Judge Sherman Minton, was a close friend of Mr. Truman in the Senate, and that fact may have strongly influenced the President in making his selection. At the same time Judge Minton has been on the bench for eight years, and reports from the Chicago area which the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals serves indicate that his record for fairness and sound judgment is good.

It may well be that many in Washington will have an unfavorable view of the appointment because of the unjudicial qualities that Mr. Minton demonstrated in the Senate. It was always recognized there that he had courage and a rather fierce determination to serve the cause of the underprivileged. It was the all-out nature of Senator Minton's New Dealism and the hot contests in which he became involved that gave an impression that his emotions sometimes ran away with his judgment.

In Washington he is also remembered for his bitter attacks upon the press and for his bill making it a felony for a newspaper to publish anything known to be false. Completely overlooking the impossibility of determining the truth or falsity of every item of news, the Senator urged fines up to $10,000 and imprisonment for as much as two years for the publication of untruths. It can scarcely be said that his bill suggested attachment to the guarantee of freedom of the press that the Supreme Court is expected to uphold.

Nor was Senator Minton's attitude toward the Supreme Court that of a constitutional scholar or a judicious-minded statesman. At one time he proposed to limit the power of the Supreme Court so that it would be unable to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional unless seven of its nine members concurred. In these days of numerous split decisions that arrangement might have given a minority of three control of the court in cases involving the constitutionality of congressional acts.

Our information, however, is to the effect that Judge Minton has not carried his passionate crusades to the bench. His record is said to be that of a liberal-minded judge who has made a good impression on the bench and bar of the Middle West. He can scarcely be classified among the most brilliant judges of the country, but if his record in Chicago is a reliable guide to the service he will render on the supreme bench our institutions will be in no danger at his hands.

Soviet Science

The wish may very well be father to the thought but there is a certain measure of comfort, nevertheless, in the opinion expressed the other day by Bertrand Russell that even if Russia built an atomic bomb it probably wouldn't explode. He based this happy prognostication on the premise that Stalin would probably insist that it be constructed in accordance with Marxist scientific dogmas a hundred years old. "There is reason to think Stalin will insist on a new orthodoxy in atomic physics," said Lord Russell, "since there is much in the quantum theory that runs contrary to Communist dogma."

It was insistence on this sort of dogma, it will be remembered, that kept German physicists from the discovery of nuclear fission, toward which, prior to the Nazi regime, they had been well on the way. Physicists who had Jewish blood were denied opportunities for research and others were so restricted by political authorities that work on nuclear fission was entirely abandoned in the Reich. Indeed, the restriction of science to the service of the state was so rigid there as to result in a stultification which, as events proved, did the state a very great disservice.

But it would be the most arrant folly, of course, to count upon the doctrinaire disciplining of science in the Soviet Union for our protection. We had better keep our powder, or at any rate our proximity fuses and radar equipment, dry. The real lesson to be learned from what Earl Russell has pointed out is that we must not permit the Sovietization of science in the United States. We must, in other words, accord scientists the widest measure of freedom in research, relying not upon regimentation but upon the free play of their intellectual curiosity. We must avoid the barriers that keep able minds from participation in research and the compartmentalization—sometimes urged by those who take a narrow view of security—that forbids the fructification of men's work through the interchange of ideas. The security of the United States in the atomic field does not lie so much in secrecy as in the maintenance of scientific supremacy.

Murray Vs. Fairless

The telegraphic interchange between President Murray of the United Steel Workers and President Fairless of the United States Steel Corp. brings out very clearly the nature of the disagreement that threatens to precipitate a strike. Mr. Murray requests the company to accept the steel fact-finding board's recommendations as a basis for settlement. Mr. Fairless interprets that demand as implying outright acceptance of the board's recommendations preliminary to resumption of negotiations. In reply he points out that the recommendations of the board are not binding on either party. That was clearly understood when the companies reluctantly consented to submit their case to the presidential fact-finding board.

The board was not set up to arbitrate the dispute; so the steel companies are entirely within their rights in taking exception to some or any of its recommendations. President Truman hit the nail on the head when he said yesterday that there is a difference between accepting a thing as a basis for negotiations and outright acceptance of a recommendation. It seems, therefore, that Mr. Murray cannot rely on White House support if he continues to press demands for unconditional acceptance of the board's findings.

As a matter of fact, the board's recommendations in regard to social insurance and pensions are in some respects open to serious objection. There is also room for differing interpretations of its proposals in regard to social insurance and pensions. Mr. Murray, for instance, might conclude that acceptance of the board's recommendations would commit the companies to approval of a noncontributory pension plan providing $70 a month for aged employes. On the other hand, the companies could point out that this pension proposal is based on union estimates of costs which have been challenged by the companies as much too low. The companies might also cite the board's opinion that a study of pension plans is necessary before intelligent bargaining over a pension program can be concluded.

The board also admits that its recommendations are based on evidence obtained from 19 leading steel companies and are not intended to apply automatically to individual companies. In spite of a presumption that recommendations as to social insurance and pensions should apply to these particular companies, the board's report suggests a return to collective bargaining in order to provide an opportunity to each company to prove that the "recommendations herein discussed are in fact not applicable to it." Incidentally, Mr. Fairless is willing to join with the union in a study of pensions as a basis for later negotiations.

We conclude, therefore, that even if both sides agreed to accept the board's recommendations in toto they would still enter the negotiations with different ideas about what they had agreed to accept. The board is fairly decisive, however, in the recommendation that pensions should be noncontributory—that is, financed entirely by employers, although even in this respect its findings are subject to qualification. Uniformity, it says, may be impossible. "Decisions will have to come by collective bargaining which will take into account differences among the various companies."

The steel companies can scarcely be expected to accept noncontributory pension proposals out of hand. In fact, there are strong arguments against doing so. A contributory system not only reduces the cost of pension plans to industry; it also gives employes a salutary sense of participation in the program. Moreover, the temptation to make unreasonable demands for increased benefits is reduced when employes have to share the cost of social insurance and pension systems.

Finally, acceptance by the steel industry of a comprehensive noncontributory system of social insurance and pensions would set a general pattern for industry and jeopardize the existence of many existing contributory social insurance plans. The board's assertion that all industry, in the absence of adequate Government programs, is obligated to provide medical and other benefits and old-age retirement pensions makes it all the more necessary to consider the effects of noncontributory social insurance and pension plans on industry at large. Certainly the system should not be adopted by the steel industry under pressure of a strike threat. Since the companies have agreed to enter into discussions of welfare plans, it seems to us that they have accepted the board's recommendations as a basis for negotiations. That is all the President is asking and it is all the union has a right to demand.

U. N. Delegate

The President's choice of John Sherman Cooper, former Republican Senator from Kentucky, as a member of the American delegation to the fourth session of the United Nations General Assembly is certain to be universally applauded. It rounds out this country's representation, maintaining the bipartisanship which has been one of the vital sources of its strength, with a member of conspicuous ability and integrity. And at the same time it recaptures for an unfortunate casualty of the political tides an opportunity for public service. This is a lame-duck appointment, if the term may be applied to a defeated member of the minority party, which is altogether in the national interest.

It would scarcely be possible for anyone to bring to the American delegation the extraordinary knowledge and experience of foreign affairs taken from it when John Foster Dulles moved over to the United States Senate. Mr. Cooper will bring to his colleagues, however, great aptitude and interest and a record of devotion to the country's bipartisan foreign policy during his brief term of senatorial service. He can be counted upon, in cooperation with former Senator Warren Austin, Philip C. Jessup and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who will continue to serve as delegates, to keep the unity and effectiveness of the American team unimpaired.

Housing Co-ops

Senator Sparkman's bill giving Federal aid to cooperative housing has provoked a lively controversy. His plan to create a Cooperative Housing Administration and to permit direct Federal loans to housing co-ops was approved by the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency but rejected by the corresponding House committee. It appears to have aroused a good deal of interest among veteran and labor union groups which see in it the possibility of securing new housing that middle-income families can afford to pay for. That interest augurs well for growth of the cooperative housing movement in the United States.

This newspaper has taken a stand against direct Federal loans to housing co-ops because of the other vast demands on the Treasury and because of the element of subsidy that, in all probability, would be involved. We think this position is sound. But nothing in our recent editorial cast any reflections upon the principle of cooperative housing. Co-ops providing housing for their members have been in operation in this and other countries for many years, and while the American experience in this field is limited, a number of successful ventures can be pointed out. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, for example, have demonstrated what can be done with their 1753 cooperative apartments in New York.

It is significant to note, however, that the large project launched by the ACW in 1947 is financed by a private mortgage loan for 25 years at 3½ per cent interest. Co-ops can operate successfully without going directly to the Federal Treasury, and it seems to us desirable that they should do so. Without obtaining Federal loans, they still offer to well-knit groups having common interests the advantages of lower housing costs and an increased sense of community responsibility.

There should be little difficulty in arriving at a compromise that would give encouragement to the cooperative movement without resorting to direct Federal loans. As we previously pointed out, the Sparkman bill would give notable advantages to "nonprofit cooperative ownership housing corporations" under its mortgage-insurance provisions. Mortgages obtained by such co-ops could be insured up to 90 per cent of the value of the project—100 per cent in the case of veterans. Amortization could be extended over 40 years at interest rates of not more than 4 per cent. More important in the eyes of some is the provision for technical advice and assistance in the organization of housing co-ops and in the planning and development of their projects. The bill calls for an assistant commissioner to administer these provisions, thus going a long way toward overcoming the supposed lack of sympathy with co-ops on the part of the Federal Housing Administration.

Only by actual experience can it be determined whether these provisions will give the desired impetus to cooperative housing. If technical assistance and mortgage insurance fail, it will be time enough to consider direct Federal loans. Meanwhile, we cannot help thinking that these mortgage-insurance provisions offer substantial aid to cooperative housing.

Chemical Chief

After the promotion machinations of Maj. Gen. Alden Waitt, it would have been difficult for the President to choose a new chief of the Army Chemical Corps from within the corps itself. In an effort to insure his own reappointment, General Waitt had disparaged the qualifications of the other chemical Corps generals, and the trustworthiness of his evaluations was cast in doubt. Accordingly, the President was almost forced to bring in top leadership from the outside.

For such a renowned paratroop leader as Maj. Gen. Anthony H. McAuliffe to be selected for this job comes as something of a surprise. General McAuliffe, the hero of Bastogne, has a popular reputation as a hard-bitten combat commander, and currently he heads the Twenty-fourth Division in Japan. Nevertheless, there is much good sense in the choice. General McAuliffe served for a period after the war in administration of the Army research program and as an Army representative on the Research and Development Board. He thus is familiar with the scientific aspects of Army administration, and in particular with the potentialities of bacteriological warfare, which has become one of the Chemical Corps' main concerns. Adequate preparation in BW calls for constant and sensitive application, and judging from his past record, General McAuliffe will bring to his new job an impressive talent.

WINGED DAY

This is a day serene and smooth,
A plumaged day for my demand—
A shining bird which stops in flight
To perch upon my outstretched hand.

Let me not break with sudden breath
The charm which brought a thing so shy,
So feathered with soft golden hours,
With such a jeweled topaz eye;
Lest I bemoan, with grief-bowed head,
A bright winged day which, startled, fled!

Political Zionism

I have just read the latest press release made by Daniel Frisch, president of the Zionist Organization of America. It has never been possible to take Mr. Frisch, his predecessors, or the ZOA lightly, but this latest message to the American Jewish community makes rather grave statements and accusations which bear remarking by legislative and judicial bodies in this country.

Mr. Frisch makes the following statement: "The Arabs in the Middle East, their friends in London and Washington, are poised for a powerful two-pronged drive against Israel in an offensive to force Israel's hand in the Arab refugee question . . . At this grave hour, Israel turns once again to American Jewry for moral and political aid in the battle against the sinister and powerful forces that would wreck the new state . . . As the active conscience of American Jewish identification with Israel, the ZOA has its destined role and task."

Close examination of these statements plus investigation of ZOA activities, present and past, easily leads to the conclusion that the ZOA is the agent of a foreign state, acting in its interests, and as such should be registered with the Justice Department or under the legislation affecting lobbies in the United States.

One can have little criticism regarding humanitarian objectives of a group aiding homeless people and restoring them to the dignity of useful beings. This is covered by planks of moral and economic aid in the ZOA platform. But how else can one interpret "political aid," particularly when it is spelled out as "the active conscience of American Jewish identification with Israel?"

For its humanitarian objectives I sincerely trust the Zionist Organization of America will not be adversely affected, but for its political activities I certainly hope it is forced to identify itself for what it is.

Democratic Check

Your correspondent of September 7, Hayden Talbot, wonders whether the alleged general mediocrity of officials in a democracy is proof that democracy is too inefficient and should be replaced by some sort of aristocracy.

Well, we have had our Vaughans and Hardings, but I somehow prefer this "mess" to the "ideal" setups in Russia, Spain and prewar Germany, Italy and Japan.

Officials in an aristocracy are likely to be as selfish as those in a democracy; even more so, since they don't have to worry about being displaced as long as they are in good with the boss.

On the other hand, with free speech, universal education and universal suffrage, there is always a chance of improvement. For example, look at the decline of Pendergast, Hague and Crump.

Opera House

While the people of Washington are engaged in a political effort that, through the name "Home Rule," evokes unpleasant memories of Mr. Gladstone, two cultural tragedies are being neglected — tragedies all the more far-reaching because Washington today is the London, Paris, Vienna and St. Petersburg of yesteryear rolled into one.

The first of these tragedies is that Washington lacks an opera house, an inconceivable shortcoming in a city that aspires to take the place of those gay and grand cities I have named. Secondly, the one building in Washington that does justice to the nineteenth century (and to be a great capital a city must live up to the spacious grace and dignified intensity of that epoch) is now, in all its intricate beauty, defiled by base Federal lackeys.

These two tragedies can be solved simultaneously by converting the old State Department Building into an opera house. If this were done, Washington could face the difficult vulgarities of the present with all the stately asurance of the past.

'Too Much Crime'

You published in your issue of September 12 an editorial entitled "Too Much Crime."

I can tell you some things in this connection that will put you to thinking: Fifty returning convicts come into the District of Columbia just about every day in the year—some from the District penal institutions, some from the Federal penal system and many from the States. These men are without jobs, money or friends.

The police cannot halt a crime epidemic. You have to use your brain to stop it. You have to put the thought into the brain of man to go to work instead of stealing. Make it easy for him to follow that course.

EARL E. DUDDING,
President, Prisoners Relief Society.

Racial Progress

Despite road blocks and barriers set up by those who want to oppose the liberal forces working in the Capital of the Nation, it is gratifying to note how much progress is being made.

Let us take stock of some of the evidences of growth in democracy. With one or two exceptions colored students attend most of the Catholic institutions. Gonzaga now has two for the first time; Georgetown has students in the law school, and many attend Catholic University, and high school children will undoubtedly attend the newly planned Catholic High School.

Colored citizens have regularly attended plays at Olney, Meridian Hill, and pictures at Dupont Theater.

Some phases of intercultural education are in evidence in Washington. One group of police have had some indoctrination in the facts of race relations. Our schools have been studying intergroup education although little has yet been done in extending the practices to children in school.

The Board of Recreation is making progress that will speed up when a few retirements of present personnel take place. The Navy and the Air Forces are integrating. Soon the Army will follow. It is inevitable.

Colored and white boys are competing in larger numbers and in wider areas on the fields of sports. Griffith Stadium is witnessing more and more star athletes on the professional baseball and football fields.

The Commies are using the Paul Robeson incident with telling effect. We can and are offsetting this by our progress here.

E. R. HENDERSON.

"Postscript To Peekskill"

It appears strange that a paper such as The Washington Post would have repeated editorials regarding the Peekskill incidents and the riot of last week which displayed so little understanding of the real situation. How can any intelligent person or anyone acquainted with history but see the pattern that is being evolved in our country? What happened at Peekskill is the same as happened in Germany when "hoodlums" were given freedom to attack the Jewish people. Here it is the Communists and the Negro people.

Eyewitnesses, victims of the attacks which followed the concert by Mr. Robeson, have clearly stated that the police did nothing to stop the "force and violence" of the mobsters, but aided and abetted them. Autos leaving the concert grounds were directed in the path of the attackers while the police helped them in their abuse of the people. A reporter stated in his paper that an officer hurled a vile epithet at and was ready to attack him but seeing his press card desisted. Photos are shown of officers throwing persons on the ground and abusing them.

This collusion of force and violence in a democratic country is a disgrace and an insult to all Americans.

GERTRUDE EVANS,
Executive Secretary, Progressive Party of the District of Columbia.

Thanks for your September 10 editorial, "Postcript to Peekskill." You are absolutely right. I am of the same opinion and wish to be counted as one of those who refuse to believe that this contention is an "attack on a whole people" but is "purely personal," and in this case one person in particular. Let others who think and act as he does take heed. There are still some people in the country who do not intend to put up with it without protest.

F. L.
Washington.

Your defense of Governor Dewey's handling of the situation indicates that you probably paid no attention to the Associated Press photographs which showed police and deputies attacking not hoodlums but the people they were supposed to be protecting. The best example shows a Negro being clubbed by several guardians of law and order at once. Since these photographs clearly deny your case that the police were on hand to prevent violence it is rather unusual that you did not see fit to print them. Other photographs, in the same vein, were available from the International News Service. Thus you have been scooped by the Washington edition of the Pittsburgh Courier.

A further, and even more incomprehensible portion of your September 12 editorial, "Postscript to Peekskill," contains the following sentence: "Thus to uphold the right of free assembly in his (Robeson's) case is to risk the possibility of riot." This calls to mind the attitude of the sheriffs of many rural Southern communities, who refuse to protect lynch victims from a mob because there would be a riot, they say. This attitude you have roundly and righteously condemned in the past, so you must have suffered a change of heart.

It is very easy to defend someone's right to differ when the mob does not object, but there is also no reason to defend such opinions. The right to differ not only in a minor but in a major sense is what distinguishes Americans from most other peoples. Capitalism and pro-American sentiment are subject to violence. Merely substituting different taboos in the United States does not make the violence any sweeter.

Washington Calling

Sharing The Atom

ONE BY ONE the thorny questions that threaten the peace of the world are being analyzed by British, Canadian and American officials. Starting with the toughest one of all—the dangerous unbalance between pound and dollar, the conferees are moving about the globe not neglecting any of the trouble spots from Indo-China to Yugoslavia.

They will shortly get down to a nagging piece of business that has been as irritating as a boil. That is how far the United States is to go in sharing its technical know-how on the atom bomb with Great Britain.

At the outset at least, top-ranking officials will not be directly concerned. In preliminary talks the groundwork will be laid for decisions that ultimately can be made only at the highest level. One of Britain's most distinguished scientists, physicist Sir James Chadwick, will take part in the preliminary discussions.

It more or less gets down to this: Britain has all the knowledge necessary to make a Hiroshima-type bomb. A plant in England is in process of construction capable of making that type of bomb.

But the British lack the know-how for constructing the newer type of bomb which is said to be much more destructive than the original model exploded over Hiroshima. This know-how is one of the things the British negotiators are seeking.

THEY DO NOT, however, feel that they are petitioners. They have tangible resources needed by this country either now or in the immediate future. To begin with, Britain and Canada control most of the world's supply of uranium. Discoveries have been made in this country, but for the most part they are of low-grade ore difficult and costly to refine.

In the second place, British scientists are continuing to do pioneering work. They may before too long have important results to communicate to American scientists if a full and free exchange of knowledge can be agreed upon. That is one reason Chadwick is taking part.

Last July, at the time of the hush-hush meeting called by President Truman in Blair House, the atmosphere surrounding the atomic question was charged with suspicion and fear. Partly that was the fault of the secret, yet not so secret, nature of the meeting. Partly it was an outgrowth of the fantastic charges that had been aired before the Joint Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee by Senator Hickenlooper.

Some hard common sense was injected into the Blair House meeting conspicuously by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who spoke frankly and earnestly of the need to maintain an honest working alliance with Great Britain in every department. In the two months that have intervened the suspicion and fear have receded.

IT HAS become ever more apparent that honest and frank cooperation is essential for any hope of peace. That kind of cooperation made it possible to fight a war to victory in the face of what had seemed overwhelmingly heavy odds.

Incidentally, it was British science and, above all, the conviction of British scientists that made President Roosevelt willing to launch an all-out effort to get an atomic explosive. Once that decision had been taken on the basis of early British experimentation, American resources and American technical and scientific skills were thrown in without stint. No other nation in the world could have done what was pushed through under the driving direction of Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves.

British scientists at the Los Alamos (N. Mex.) Laboratory contributed to every phase leading up to the bomb. They have gone on from there. In the atomic energy investigation Robert F. Bacher, a former member of the Atomic Energy Commission, testified as follows:

"The British have an atomic energy project. They are setting about the production of fissionable material and have announced that they are developing and intend to produce atomic weapons. I am sure they will be successful in this undertaking. They have all of the technical know-how, all of the scientific background necessary for such a development . . ."

The staff of the Senate-House Atomic Committee is completing a report covering the investigation into the Hickenlooper charges. It should be made public in a week or 10 days. That report, too, should clear the air, since the investigation did not sustain the attack with all its sensationalism. In a calm and reasonable atmosphere the three nations can come to a sensible agreement.

Mental Health

According to Malvina Lindsay, in her column of September 10, Americans "have been losing ground in mental and emotional health." However, because more people are attending social agencies and psychiatrists does not necessarily mean that emotional maladjustment is on the increase.

More people may be looking for help because they are becoming aware of disturbances that have been existing all along, and, because of the increased (and conflicting) emphasis on mental health, psychology and psychiatry, are making their troubles known.

A Communication

Public Interest And The B-36 Inquiry

By Ellis M. Zacharias
Rear Admiral, United States Navy (Retired)

THE RECENT statement of Capt. John C. Crommelin, U. S. Navy, released to the press on September 11, 1949, should be given the fullest consideration by the American people. Apparently acting after much soul-searching on his part, Captain Crommelin cast aside all thoughts of his career. He stated that he was impelled to his decision because he was convinced that the present trends of the B-36 investigation are gravely dangerous to our future national security. Further, that he was thinking only of his country, his children, and the succeeding generations. He is an officer of considerable experience and effective service. He is one of five brothers in the Navy, two of whom gave their lives in the recent war.

I dare say that the whole Navy, and most of the Army, have the same feelings about the faulty thinking in our present strategic concepts, and the political trends that go along with the discussions of future national defense.

Captain Crommelin has chosen between his career, with its promising future, and the welfare of his country. He has chosen wisely for he can be assured that the glory of increased rank is infinitesmal when compared to the tranquillity and peace of mind resulting from a duty well done. Others before him have chosen such a road. They have benefited the country and have had the satisfaction of being able to live with oneself. Come what may, he will never regret having served the people of this country in the spirit in which he serves.

IT IS OBVIOUS to those who have studied the past fine record of Mr. Cedric Worth, that he was motivated by similar instincts, realizing that something drastic would have to be done in order to bring into proper focus the dangerous phases of the B-36 question, if not the whole subject of unification. Many of those who have had the privilege of associating with Mr. Worth must have felt that he was carrying the weight of the tremendous battle alone. Undoubtedly Captain Crommelin felt that way when he chose the course of action that he did through sheer desperation and a feeling that until now he was "an accessory to a crime." In a democracy, it should not be necessary for those who know the truth to risk their careers to get the facts to the attention of those who have to legislate on such problems.

Captain Crommelin quite properly feels the greatest concern when he visualizes the congressional investigation of aircraft procurement threatening to becloud the main issue, namely, whether the B-36 thinking is a direct threat to the peace instead of being one of the deterrents to war. That this is a definite danger is the opinion of many of our best civilian and military scientists. It is urgent that we clear up this muddled thinking.

If Congressmen are to act properly, they could read profitably the incisive articles in the July issue of the Atlantic Monthly by Walter Lippmann and Hanson W. Baldwin, entitled "The Russian-American War" and "What Kind of War." In those articles the authors have gotten away from the confused and isolated thinking of the "military mind," a vital necessity if we are to allow the elements working for peace to proceed without the handicaps of abrupt authority, flamboyance, or ill-advised pronouncements which have been so prevalent throughout the cold war. There is still a gross lack of appreciation of the values of the psychological factors at a time like this. The attitude that "we fight our battles with guns, not with words" has, I am afraid, crept into the concepts regarding the capabilities of the B-36, and disregards entirely its limitations both as a deterrent to war or as a weapon to win a war after it has started.

CAPTAIN CROMMELIN has referred to the danger of the General Staff blocking off the civilian elements of our Government. This has been an ever-present danger since the General Staff was established in 1908. At the time it was set up, the General Staff was to be merely an advisory body to the Secretary of War and the President. But ever since its establishment, it has sought to gain administrative control of the Army. Now, it has other ambitions which I consider definitely prejudicial to our future security, and I entertain the same fears as those voiced by Captain Crommelin.

We should recall that the consistent proponent of legislation to shift such powers has been practically one man. In 1920, in the wake of World War I, the bills were nursed by the then chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, Senator (now Congressman) Wadsworth. In the wake of World War II, when the National Security Act of 1947 was being considered, he was again the driving member of the House committee. Congressman Wadsworth is the father-in-law of Stuart Symington, now Secretary of the Air Force.

I have just reread my testimony given during the closing days of the unification hearings. My statements regarding the dangers of the move and the friction and turmoil which would result have been borne out by the events since the bill was passed. There is much real information available to the congressional committees on this vital subject. If the side issue, which evolved about the irregularities in the procurement of B-36s is allowed to obscure the main issue before Mr. Vinson's committee, a grave injustice will be done to the people of the United States through neglect of hazards to security.

THERE IS much more than meets the eye in this whole business. Captain Crommelin referred to the grave concern and remarks of Mr. Forrestal over "wild statements and acts" of some Air Force officers who were "sniping at the Army and Navy, to such an extent that I am afraid they will undermine the security of the country." What were those wild statements and acts? The congressional committee should find out. It would not be difficult.

There appeared momentarily before the Navy Court of Inquiry, now recessed until September 12, a young man named Hugh L. Hanson. Until recently, he was for many years a civilian engineer in the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics. Some time ago, Mr. Hanson was transferred out of Washington to the West coast. Why?

Readers of The Washington Post will recall that Mr. Hanson was a frequent contributor to "Letters to the Editor" every time he felt it advisable to refute those "wild statements." The record and Mr. Hanson are available. There may be a most interesting story with a direct bearing upon the sanctimonious air of this deplorable situation.

Congressman Vinson can make one of his greatest contributions to his long and able service to the country if he insists that the investigation by his committee continue, and that it remain headed in the direction in which it originally started. The committee will then be able to make an invaluable contribution to our grand strategy which seems to have become bogged down in purely military concepts which are questionable in the extreme.

Washington.

Union Assessment On Nonunion Men Held Illegal

A trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that any contract clause requiring nonunion members to pay union fees is illegal.

A. Bruce Hunt, the examiner, recommended that the NLRB order the Public Service Company of Colorado, Denver, to restore to his job a worker fired in 1947 for failing to pay "support money" to the AFL Electrical Workers

This was in accordance with a contract clause that employes not required to become union members were nevertheless required to make $2 monthly payments to the union "for support of the bargaining unit."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Taft And Eisenhower

SENATOR Robert A. Taft's first Ohio speeches indicate a vital fact. Taft evidently believes, that an out-and-out isolationist campaign is the best way to make his crucial fight for reelection to the Senate. This is not only the appeal he will make to the Ohio voters. It is also the appeal by which he hopes to win the Republican presidential nomination two years after the Ohio voting.

Obviously, if Taft is victorious next year, the already strong isolationist tendency of the right wing Republicans will be immensely fortified and intensified. And in part for this very reason, the stand Taft has taken is tending to raise up powerful opponents against him.

As has been previously reported in this space, the Democratic national leadership has left the choice of a candidate to beat Taft to the united and embattled labor groups. With one or two exceptions, the Ohio Democratic leaders have now taken the same stand. And the man who has been tapped is the Farm Bureau and Cooperative movement leader, the picturesque and personable Murray D. Lincoln.

Although Lincoln has by now received assurances of support that would persuade most political hopefuls, he has been hesitating for a personal reason. He draws his only salary as president of the Cooperative League, whose farmer directors are strongly Republican. If he makes the race against Taft he will lose his job and his livelihood.

Until Taft began preaching the narrowest isolationist doctrine all over Ohio, Lincoln was inclined against yielding to the pressure on him. He is a man of intense convictions, however; and the challenge to these convictions offered by Taft's campaign strategy is tending to draw him into the fight. It is now a good bet that Lincoln will run.

THERE IS no use trying to forecast the outcome of the most important, and most disputed, State election in a great many decades. Even if Lincoln runs, Taft may perhaps win. It is further possible that the resulting increase of congressional isolationism will produce some sort of international catastrophe even before 1952. But whatever other results may ensue, a Taft victory in Ohio can be counted on to stimulate very powerfully another major Republican development.

To put it bluntly, those who know him are convinced that Dwight D. Eisenhower will be infinitely more receptive to the Republican nomination if the party's only other alternative is the out-and-out isolationist, Senator Taft. There is no need to expatiate on the depth and strength of General Eisenhower's belief in the critical importance of American world leadership. Anyone who knows him and his record is aware that he thinks a revival of isolationism will doom the cause of freedom in the world.

Of late, moreover, Eisenhower has shown signs of increasing political interest, both in his speeches, and in the attention with which he has been following the national situation. And it is not insignificant that a number of the same men who financed the Willkie and Dewey campaigns for the Republican nomination, in 1940 and 1948, are now reported to be lining up for an effort for Eisenhower.

Undoubtedly, of course, the idea of seeking the nomination has not as yet even crystallized in Eisenhower's mind. But it is also undoubted that if Senator Taft is the leading contender, Eisenhower will hardly be able to resist the resulting political and moral pressure to make the race. Last time, besides his strong argument that no officer should go straight from the Army into politics, Eisenhower often pointed out to would-be supporters that there were plenty of strong alternative contestants. He used particularly to mention Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg.

Now, however, there is no longer any question of Senator Vandenberg leaving his present great position to try for the Presidency. Equally, although Thomas E. Dewey may wish to be a king-maker, and would find Eisenhower an easy king to make, the New York Governor must be credited with enough good sense not to seek the top place a third time.

As for Harold E. Stassen, he is in the uncomfortable position of being pretty well debarred from political progress in his adopted Pennsylvania, unless he makes an abnorrent alliance with the prehistoric Grundy-Owlett faction. The other possible Republican contenders all suffer from comparable handicaps. Thus, if Taft wins in Ohio, the chances are that Eisenhower will have to choose between stepping down from his nonpolitical pedestal, or letting Taft take over the Republican Party by default.

All this is perhaps peering too far into the future. But these long range speculations both have some foundation in the present, and serve to emphasize a vital point. The Ohio election was already sufficiently important before Taft made his isolationist choice. It is now not exaggerating to say that the national future may hang on the outcome.

Senate Passes Trade Bill Without Peril-Point Curbs

Democratic absentees were paired, some with other Democrats.

Then the fur bloc, spearheaded by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), moved into action, and it took the Senate four breath-taking votes to lick it, 43 to 40.

McCarthy's amendment would have required the President to set any quotas or other regulations against imports of foreign furs or fur articles recommended by the tariff commission.

Tie Broken by Barkley

The amendment won, 43 to 40, on the first tally. A parliamentary maneuver to clinch the count ended in a 41 to 41 tie, and Barkley broke this in favor of the Administration.

A vote to reconsider approval of the amendment ended in a 41 to 41 tie, too, but through a tally clerk's error Barkley first announced it was adopted, 41 to 40. Challenged later by Republicans, Barkley said it made no difference since he would have broken the tie in favor of reconsideration.

While the tallying was going on, Senate Administration Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), was busy as a bee across the aisle trying to persuade some fur-State Democrats to change their votes.

He managed it just before the fourth tally and the McCarthy amendment was defeated, 43 to 40.

Three Democrats Switch

These Democratic Senators switched from "aye" on the first roll call to "no" on the fourth—Anderson (N. Mex.), Ellender (La.), and Thomas (Utah).

By almost as close a squeak, the Administration won again in an oil quotas.

Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) sought to limit imports of foreign petroleum and petroleum products to 5 percent of domestic needs.

Through another tally slip, Barkley first announced the amendment was adopted, 42 to 41. Later he announced a correction. He disclosed the amendment actually failed, 41 to 40.

Senate Repulican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) challenged the correction and a long parliamentary wrangle ensued. To clear the air, Lucas moved for a "recapitulation" of the vote. On the recap, the Administration beat the oil amendment 41 to 40.

Also Beaten Decisively

These other amendments were beaten by decisive margins:

By Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), to suspend trade concessions to any country which discriminates against American goods. Defeated, 54 to 27.

By Senator Hugh Butler (R., Neb.), to require the President to reopen 13 early trade agreements to write in a so-called "escape clause" included in the later pacts. Defeated, 53 to 29.

By Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) to completely exempt handmade glassware and handmade pottery from the trade agreements program. Defeated, 61 to 20.

By Senator Millikin, a technical amendment fixing a June 30, 1951, termination date. Defeated, 49 to 33.

By Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.), to substitute a flexible import fee system under a strengthened Tariff Commission for the reciprocal trade program. Defeated, 63 to 17.

In the last round of debate before the voting, Senators Millikin and Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) denied the peril point device would in any way hamper the trade agreements program.

Only an Amber Light

Vandenberg said it wasn't a red traffic light but "only the amber light which says "Stop long enough to look."

Senator Lucas, however, called it a reversion to high protectionism and warned other nations might retaliate.

"Whoever heard of anyone retaliating against the honey pot," replied Millikin.

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), floor manager of the bill, made the closing plea for passage of the bill without restrictions.

George produced a letter from former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, father of the program. Hull called the program "an indispensable cornerstone of enduring peace based on international cooperation, upon the success of which our own security and prosperity depend."

Fourth Parley Fails to Settle Railroad Strike

St. Louis, Sept. 15 (AP).—A fourth conference ended late today without any prospect of early settlement of the Missouri Pacific Railroad strike, now a week old.

Guy A. Thompson, trustee in bankruptcy for the railroad, said "I personally can't see that we have made any progress up to this point."

The dispute is over 282 individual claims, all different, involving interpretation of rules. Five thousand operating employes are on strike, and some 20,000 others have been laid off.

Today the representatives of the four striking brotherhoods turned down the latest management proposal. The management wanted to end the strike and then settle in this manner: pay some claims, negotiate others, and refer still others—including the major ones—to agencies specified in the National Railway Labor Act.

Grapefruit-Sized Hail Hospitalizes Romans

Rome, Sept. 15 (AP).—A brief but violent shower of hailstones, some as big as grapefruit, sent a half dozen Romans to hospitals and clinics for treatment and frightened thousands of others last night.

Two persons, hit on the head, were treated for concussion. A dozen parked automobiles were dented. Windows were broken and roofs damaged.

Crommelin In New Job

promoted to deputy chief of all Navy personnel.

Crommelin had been attached to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the so-called "inner sanctum" of American military leadership, with headquarters in the Pentagon.

The air warfare division to which Crommelin now is assigned by Matthews is one of the key divisions of the office of Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air.

It takes in planning, training, tactical combat, air intelligence and naval photography.

The confusion over Crommelin's new post developed after President Truman had personally signaled his approval of a Navy decision, announced earlier this week, not to punish Crommelin for his sharp criticism of the military hierarchy.

Mr. Truman told a news conference that Secretary Matthews has capably handled the case and it will remain in Matthews' hands.

Crommelin, a veteran Navy flier and former skipper of the aircraft carrier Saipan, had charged that the Navy's attack power was being "nibbled to death" by top brass in the Pentagon. That was 10 days ago.

Then in the afternoon, Navy press officers said Crommelin had a new job in Navy air personnel, stepping up into a berth just vacated by a two-star admiral.

What happened in the interlude between that announcement and Matthews' later statement was not officially explained.

Privately, Pentagon officials said hat Matthews had "changed somebody's mind."

On Capitol Hill, Representative Cole (R., N. Y.), a member of the House Armed Services Committee, praised the first (Navy press section) announcement as "most commendable."

Britain's Crisis—Close-up View

Kuhn

You've heard about Britain's threatened crack-up from many amateur observers—now read how it seemed first-hand to a seasoned world affairs reporter. Ferdinand Kuhn has just returned from a tour of England and Europe. In Sunday's Washington Post he tells you how the British picture appeared to him.

For an authoritative survey of John Bull's present plight, read Kuhn's story in Section II.

Will Italy Lose Her Whole Empire?

Until recently, Italy thought she would be allowed to keep some of her pre-Mussolini colonies. But now, because the U. S. and England are determined to keep the Mediterranean open, Rome has whittled her colonial desires to a minimum. Post reporter Frank Gervasi, in another on-the-spot story, tells you what chances Italy has of holding on to her last possession.

One on the Aisle—

Orson Reduced To Mere Acting

By Richard L. Coe

ORSON WELLES, in "Black Magic" at the Trans-Lux, gets around to thinking he's God. Creation is murkier than you might expect.

The Welles of promise in years past used to write, direct, act and whatever else Genius does in the movies. His pictures had the stamp of excitement about them which promised a future.

In the current whoopdoodle, Orson seems to have been permitted only to act. Edward Small "presents," Gregory Ratoff produced and directed, Charles Bennett wrote the screen play from an Alexander Dumas story, with "additional scenes and dialogue by Richard Schayer."

The chap Orson plays is Cagliostro, a whiz of an eighteenth century hypnotist who seems to have hobnobbed with Louis XV and XVI, Mme. DuBarry and Marie Antoinette. The windup of the yarn concerns that necklace business of Marie's which, unless I'm totally unhinged, served Dumas in at least one other story. Orson loves a gal who looks just like Marie, gets under his hypnotic spell and works himself into a terrible frenzy of self-deification.

Chief attractions of the picture are the sets and costumes, which are crashingly spectacular, although they don't have anything to do with the French setting and period.

"BLACK MAGIC." United Artists release of Edward Small. Produced and directed by Gregor Ratoff. Screen play by Charles Bennett from Alexander Dumas' Cagliostro story in "Memoirs of a Physician." Additional dialogue by Richard Schayer. Photographed in Italy by Ubaldo Arata and Anchise Brizzi. At the Trans-Lux.

It seems that in making this picture Edward Small, producer of "The Man in the Iron Mask," "The Son of Monte Cristo" and "The Corsican Brothers," found he had a pack of Italian liras to spend in Italy.

Gregory Explodes

So, he sent Director Ratoff to Rome, where, gazing at Trinita dei Monti, the Piazza di Spagna staircase, the Quirinale Palace and other wonders, Gregory was "overcome with enthusiasm as he looked down from his hotel window his first morning in the Eternal City, seeing before him a picture of stately palaces, baroque houses, old Roman ruins, with the majestic dome of St. Peter's towering in the distance."

"What a set!" Gregory is reported to have "exploded."

Sooooo, he decided to make a picture about eighteenth century France.

All of which probably accounts for the rather numb trance in which Ratoff has wheeled his players about. What can you expect of a picture that takes loving pride in its Roman settings and then tells a story about Paris?

The cast is vast but confused. Orson makes like Boris in putting Nancy Guild into trances, a needless exertion since that seems to be the young lady's normal state. Margot Grahame brings some life to the turgidity as Mme. DuBarry.

Yes, the finale whimpers out into the French Revolution era, which was the subject of the theater's last tenant, "Reign of Terror."

I hope now that the kiddies are safely back in school, the Trans-Lux will cease its awful panorama on the history of eighteenth century France. I for one will slit my throat at the swish of one more furbelow.

ANTA states it is "encouraged" by the letter from 50 United States Senators to its president, Vinton Freedley, in regard to rental of the Belasco Theater . . . ANTA now will appoint a committee from its board to come to Washington to reach specific terms on the matter . . . The Senators' assurance is "accepted in principle" and, from the looks of things now, only technicalities stand in the way of ANTA getting the theater . . . Keep your fingers crossed, but it looks good.

KENT SMITH, playing opposite Miss Hayes at Olney, is one of those literate men of the theater who can talk well about anything . . . As to the job of an actor, "Unemployment is the actor's natural state," he smiles. "It's an adventurous profession and one of the troubles with it is that commercial interests, especially Hollywood, have been trying to make it a business." . . . By keeping at it in the adventurous spirit, Kent made himself both a stage and screen name . . . You'll see him next in Sam Goldwyn's "My Foolish Heart."

THAT RENAULT in front of the National and wheeling about town is one of the many stunts to herald Tuesday nights' opening of "Devil in the Flesh." . . . This highly touted French film, costarring Gerald Philippe and Micheline Presle, is evidently aimed at putting the National back in the big time movie business . . . No matter whether it's a good picture or not, I dont see exactly what it will prove.

THIS WEEK the Actors' Fund of America is making its annual appeal at Olney . . . The fund goes toward maintaining the retired players' home at Englewood, N. J., and the cause is the longest-lived in the American theater, 67 years old.

COMING BACK!—Marie Wilson's on her way back to the screen as "My Friend Irma," Paramount's adaptation of the popular radio show. John Lund, Diana Lynn and Don DeFore are among Marie's admirers

JOHN WAYNE, who knows his way around the big outdoors, launches himself as a producer-star at the Warner in "The Fighting Kentuckian." The tailor-made film fits splendidly.

For a story, they've gone into a little-known bit of Americana. It seems that Congress granted four townships of Alabama land to the officers of Napoleon's defeated troops and their families. Local politicos did their best to wrest the land from these early-day DPs, and around their efforts is spun the melodrama formula usually associated with the Westerns.

Apart from the novelty of setting, the approach is Wayne right—fist fights, barroom ruckuses, gun battles and open-space chases. Romance is there in the presence of a vairee Franch maiden, played to the last diphthong by Vera Ralston. Vera is of the upper crust and mama wants her to stay there by marrying toney Blake Randolph.

Oliver Hardy Comedy

Naturally, the elegant clothes of a Randolph are as tatters to the honest garb worn by Wayne. He's frankly coonskin clad, but oh, that honest heart. Grant Withers and Paul Fix are the small-town dictators, and Wayne knows how to deal with them.

Another novel aspect is the appearance of Oliver Hardy without Stan Laurel. This comes off acceptably, with Wayne taking the smart pal role beefy Oliver hopes to protect. Some of the comedy is pretty obvious, but Hardy's good at it and you'll get some laughs as well as Wayne's socko excitement.

The picture (from Republic) is handsomely produced and goes along at the clip familiar to Western fans. Though the story's pretty evident, the staple ingredients are neatly booted along. Wayne's fans will like it and his producer status should last a long time. And the music by Georges Antiel is decidedly amusing.—R. L. C.

Arnold Line Lawyers Study Proposal to Increase Fares

A spokesman for the Arnold bus line said yesterday that exact terms of a petition to the State Corporation Commission and the ICC for authority to raise its fares are now under study by its lawyers.

Amount of the fare increase, which will affect 50,000 passengers traveling between Fairfax, Arlington and Washington, will not be announced for "one or two weeks," the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, the Arlington Public Utilities Commission, advisory body to the county board, stated it would present its views on the proposed increase at the next meeting, September 24.

The 17-cents-an-hour wage increase, recently awarded by an arbitration board to some 200 employes, will cost the company "in excess of $200,000" an Arnold official claimed Wednesday. At that time he stated a fare increase would be hearsay.

Bernard Wahle, executive vice president and general manager of the firm, said the bus company is "without funds or incoming revenue to meet this obligation."

Pastor, 51, Jailed On Mann Act Count

Tallahasee, Fla., Sept. 15 (AP).—A 51-year-old preacher is in jail on charges of taking a high school girl across State lines for immoral purposes.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents said they arrested Elliot Preston Pauley at Lynn Haven, Fla., Tuesday on a warrant issued at Grand Rapids, Mich. He was charged with taking a 17-year-old girl from Pollard, Ala., to Grand Rapids in violation of the Federal Mann Act. He has failed to make $3000 bond.

Phobists Urged To Do the Things That Scare Them

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—Persons with phobias—dread of open spaces, crowds, stores and trains—must do the things that scare them.

In this way, a Yale psychologist said today, they probably can find a cure.

Successful treatment for this condition was described by Dr. William B. Terhune, medical director of the Silver Hill Foundation for the treatment of psychoneurosis and associate professor of psychiatry at the Yale School of Medicine.

27.9 Million in New Aid For Britain Approved

The Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday approved the purchase by Great Britain of about $26,500,000 worth of United States tobacco under the Marshall Plan.

The allocation was included in new recovery spending grants to Britain, France, western Germany and Trieste. The transactions bring total European recovery commitments to $6,649,333,000.

Britain's total new aid was $27,944,000, the bulk of which will finance purchases of flue-cured, fire-cured, dark air-cured and burley tobacco.

Senate Will Vote Today on Ilgenfritz

The Senate agreed last night to vote at 3 p. m. today on the nomination of Carl A. Ilgenfritz, vice president of the United States Steel Corp., to be chairman of the Armed Forces' Munitions Board.

Confirmation is expected, but only after a sharp fight by a group led by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), who does not believe Ilgenfritz should be allowed to keep his $70,000-a-year salary as a United States Steel executive while working for the Government.

The Senate Armed Services Committee agreed that Ilgenfritz could keep his private salary while serving as $14,000-a-year head of the munitions board. He refused to accept the post on any other terms, because otherwise he would lose his United States Steel pension rights.

Hoover Lauded Ilgenfritz

Byrd argued that this would be improper, since the munitions board plays an important role in armed services procurement.

Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) of the Armed Services Committee thought it was all right for Ilgenfritz to draw both salaries. He said that former President Herbert Hoover described Ilgenfritz as the best-qualified man in the country for the job.

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.) went to see President Truman yesterday to explain his opposition to the nomination.

Hard to Get Specialists

He said the President told him it is difficult to get specialists for the Government because of low Government pay, and "almost impossible" to get highly skilled technicians to give up their private income to enter Government service.

Johnson said he thinks Ilgenfritz is "highly qualified" for the munitions board post, but added that he does not believe the Government should establish the practice of letting men keep their corporation incomes while on the Federal payroll.

He said he is not convinced that it is so difficult to get skilled men from private industry for more or less temporary Government posts. He added it would be better for Congress to match the private salaries of these experts than to let them hang onto their business income.

Cuspid

Military Gets Exhibit Here: Bevin's Tooth

Bevin's tooth magnified

Ernest Bevin, British Foreign Minister, has left a bit of himself for permanent exhibit in Washington. Specifically, it is a lower cuspid, or canine tooth, which was extracted here last Thursday.

The tooth was made a part yesterday of the permanent collection of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, 7th st., and Independence ave. sw.

Lieut. Col. Joseph L. Bernier, in charge of oral pathology section of the institute, said the tooth is unusual in that it is double-rooted, whereas the usual one has a single root. He didn't specify if the double root made twice as big a toothache for Minister Bevin.

Orme to Support Van Meter in Race

Falls Church Mayor Albert M. Orme, yesterday announced his indorsement of incumbent City Commissioner of Revenue, La Rue Van Meter, who is up for election this November.

Van Meter, who is also city attorney, is opposed for the revenue post by A. Burke Hertz, Falls Church attorney, and Mrs. Merrill Lee Chanel, former city councilwoman.

Shimon Report Under Study by Justice Dept.

The Justice Department's criminal division yesterday began study of the Police Department's report on Lieut. Joseph Shimon to determine whether the officer should be prosecuted.

A spokesman for the Justice Department said the rpeort "has been received and is under study in the criminal division." He declined comment on the report's content and on when findings might be released.

Lieutenant Shimon, after serving as chief investigator in the United States Attorney's office since 1941, last month was transferred to the Fourteenth Precinct. The transfer came after an investigation which, according to Chief Robert J. Barrett, turned up narcotics in Shimon's desk.

The report originally was handed George Morris Fay, U. S. Attorney for the District. Fay, however, passed it on to the Justice Department to determine any action to be taken.

D. C. Triplet's Death Laid to Lung Collapse

A congenital lung defect aggravated by anesthesia caused the operating room death of a 16-month-old triplet at Gallinger Hospital, it was reported yesterday.

The child, who died Wednesday during preparations for brain surgery, was one of the triplets of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Ercolino, of 709 Irving st. ne.

Dr. Richard Whelton, Gallinger medical superintendent, reported the autopsy finding as death due to bilateral atelectasis, or sudden collapse of the lungs. The collapse, he said, was undoubtedly provoked by gas anesthesia.

The lung formation defect, he explained, consists of an unnatural, blister-like grouping of air sacs of the lung which may suddenly give way to such provocation as a sneeze or fit of coughing. When this occurs, he said, the air rushes out of the lungs into the chest cavity, causing the lungs to collapse.

It was not possible to know of the condition beforehand, he said, and without the brain operation the boy would have most certainly died. The operation was for premature closure of the fontanel, the "soft spot" of the child's skull.

Larry, another of the triplets, suffers the same premature closure but to a lesser degree than the dead boy, Paul, the doctor said. The third triplet, Carol, appears to have escaped the deformity, he said. One other child, Richard, five, also survives.

For distinguished newscasting, listen to Eric Sevareid, Lowell Thomas and Edward Murrow on WTOP, Washington Post station.

Hopes Dimmed For FDIC Cut In Bank Fees

By S. Oliver Goodman

Hopes of Washington bankers that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. might cut its guarantee fee faded yesterday.

In its annual report to Congress, the FDIC declared that stockholders of the Nation's banks have invested too little in the business themselves and, therefore, greater reliance must be placed on the Government deposit insurance fund as a cushion for contingencies.

There had been considerable feeling among bankers this year that the fee could be cut in half, thus saving local banks about $400,000 a year and the Nation's banks about 60 million dollars a year.

The present insurance assessment is 1/12 of 1 percent of total deposits. This amounts roughly to about $800,000 a year for the 19 Washington banks.

The FDIC report pointed out that the banks, though they are adding about a half billion dollars a year to their capital accounts, aren't building them up fast enough. "For many years the capital of banks has grown less rapidly than deposits or assets, so that the capital cushion has become thinner than formerly," the FDIC said.

It noted that the ratio of these accounts to loans and investments other than United States Government obligations declined from 26 per cent at the end of 1945 to 20 per cent at the end of 1948.

"To provide an appropriate rate of growth in the assets of the banking system and to maintain the present amount of bank capital relative to those assets commonly designated as 'risk assets' will require larger additions to capital than the banks have been making in recent years," the FDIC warned.

Stock Losses Minor Despite Labor Clouds

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—The stock market turned in an impressive score today in the face of highly disquieting lab r news.

The market, on average, declined. Losses were small, though, and a wide variety of stocks climbed to new highs for 1949. Final quotations in most cases were upa bit from the lows of the day.

Steel, oil, and railway shares were under pressure pretty consistently. Motion picture stocks, a couple of golds and utilities, as well as a variety of industrial specialities, showed independent strength.

Selling was heaviest immediately after the opening. This was the market's first response to news late yesterday that most of the major steel producers did not take kindly to the idea of accep[illegible]ing the recommendations of a persidential fact-finding board on the matter of social benefits for steel workers.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Thru.	Wed.
Advances	241	455
Declines	551	371
Unchanged	240	261
Total issues	1032	1085

Sales of 1,160,000 shares compared with 1,690,000 yesterday and 1,720,000 Tuesday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined four tenths of 1 point to 65.4. Weakness centered in the industrial and railway groups, while utilities did comparatively well.

U. S. Steel ended ½ down at 23¼, Bethlehem at 28⅛ and Youngstown Sheet at 65⅝ were each off ¾ point. Republic Steel slipped ⅜ to 20⅜.

Coca-Cola provided some minor fireworks with a jump of 12 points at one time and a final gain of 9 at 169. The stock has made considerable headway lately, partly because of recurrent rumors of a pending stock split and partly because recent earnings have been optimistically estimated.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—Heavy buying by export interests and general short covering led a strong rally in wheat futures today. Other grains and soybeans followed the upturn, although oats were relatively weak.

Distant wheat contracts gained almost 4 cents a bushel. The September and December deliveries hit the highest levels since January.

Wheat closed 1½ to 3¾ cents higher than the previous finish, corn was ¼ higher to ⅞ lower, oats were unchanged [illegible]

Business Outlook

Officials Play Top-the-Pension Even as Murray and Lewis

By J. A. Livingston

"WHAT worries me most about old-age pensions," declared Grandpa after dinner, "is the competition. When John L. Lewis gets a pension for his miners, Philip Murray has to go him one better for his steelworkers. Ditto Walter Reuther for the auto workers. Management does it too.

"Once a company gets hold of an energetic, imaginative executive, it ties a string to him with a retirement annuity. Then if another company wants to woo him away, it has to offer him not a higher salary but a higher pension. In an age of security, the well-to-do seek old-age security too."

Livingston

Grandpa thought a minute, then continued: "You'd think people in upper income brackets could easily put aside money to buy themselves pensions. But a lot of them are improvident. They put it off. You can see why. It's costly. I have some figures compiled by the firm of Towers, Perrin, Forster & Crosby, who specialize on company pension plans. Towers, Perrin, Forster & Crosby worked for Lewis and his coal miners until Lewis decided that their actuarial statistics didn't suit his purpose. He got Senator Bridges instead.

"Well, Towers, Perrin, and so on decided to figure out just how much an upper-bracket man would have put aside each year to get a pension which would yield him a standard of living within 35 per cent to 40 per cent of that to which he'd become accustomed. A man who earns $10,000 a year consistently would have to save about 20 per cent of his net income after taxes. A man with a $10,000 salary, which rises to $25,000, would have to set aside more than 30 per cent of his income as he approaches 65. A man who gets a $50,000 income ultimately would have to sock away 45 per cent after taxes. Here," said Grandpa, "see for yourself." He handed me a tabulation. A footnote indicated that in each case the executive began saving for a pension at 40, that he's married, but that his children have grown up. Here's what I saw:

Age.	Earnings.	Desired Annuity.	% Savings Needed.
EXECUTIVE A
40-65	$10,000	$4000	20.8%
EXECUTIVE B
40-44	$10,000	$4000	20.8%
45-49	15,000	6000	24.3
50-54	20,000	8000	29.7
EXECUTIVE C
40-44	$10,000	$4000	20.8%
45-49	20,000	8000	26.7
50-54	30,000	11,000	30.8
55-65	30,000	17,000	45.2

"That shows what I mean," said Grandpa. "Most men when they get to earning $20,000 to $50,000, can't save 30 to 45 percent of their incomes. Too many obligations: cars, servants, membership in the country club, entertainment of coworkers, customers, etc. Being a big fish usually means big living expenses.

"BESIDES a company can save for an employe cheaper than the employe can for himself. A company doesn't have to pay taxes on the money it puts in a retirement fund. Uncle Sam contributes 38 cents on the dollar—the amount that would go to corporate income taxes. You and I can only save what we've already paid taxes on. So, in a sense then, we pay taxes on savings.

"As a nation, we've got to be careful," said Grandpa. "Pension funds cost money. Whether established by the Social Security Board or by corporations, the taxes or contributions get into the country's cost structure. They add to the price of goods. And we can't afford to price goods out of one another's reach simply because we're trying to pension off one another.

"CONSIDER this. A man at 65 used to have about 12 years to live. But we're talking increasingly of earlier retirements—say, at 60. Well, if you retire a man at 60 instead of 65, that means there are five fewer years during which to build up his pension fund. That adds to cost. Second, there are five additional years in which he'll be drawing his pensions. That adds to cost. Third, he's likely to live longer than anticipated because the population is becoming healthier year by year. And that adds to the cost.

"So forbearance is necessary all around—by unions, by boards of directors. That's why an increasing number of companies are setting top limits on pensions for executives. Such restraint makes good labor strategy. Nothing steams up workers against management so much as cushy pensions—especially when the workers' pension, even including Social Security, seldom runs to more than $100 a month." With that observation, Grandpa waved me away. The monologue was closed.

Esso Boosts Price Of Heavy Fuel Oil

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Esso Standard Oil Co. today announced a price advance of 20 cents a barrel for No. 6 heavy fuel oil, effective tomorrow. The oil is used mostly as an industrial fuel.

The boost will effect all classes of trade and methods of delivery at all Atlantic Coast points. The new harbor barge price here of $1.90 a barrel compares with the present $1.70, but it still 35 per cent below the price of last November.

Esso Export Corp., another affiliate of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) at the same time announced an advance of 20 cents a barrel for bunker "C" heavy fuel oil used by ships in ocean trade. This change will be effective tomorrow at all East Coast terminals.

Most other oil companies also were expected to announce similar price advances to reflect higher cargo prices

WHY THE MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILROAD STRIKE?

Over twenty years ago, the Congress of the United States passed the Railway Labor Act. It was hailed by union leaders as a model for the settlement of labor disputes.

The leaders of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Order of Railway Conductors, and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen on the Missouri Pacific Railroad have refused to avail themselves of the peaceful means provided by this Act for settling their disputes. They insist that they be the sole umpire of their own disputes over the meaning of contracts.

There Is No Need For Strikes

With all of the available methods for the interpretation of contracts, there is no need for a strike or even a threat of a strike, but the leaders of these railroad unions have ignored the ordinary procedures established by law and insist upon imposing their own interpretations of their contracts by means of a strike.

The wheels have stopped rolling on the Missouri Pacific. They may stop rolling on other railroads at any time. Recently the Wabash Railroad was forced to discontinue operation for several days under similar circumstances.

What Are These Strikes About?

These strikes and strike threats are not about wage rates or hours. They result from disputes over the meaning of existing contracts. They cover claims for a full day's pay for less than a day's work, or for payments for services performed by others who were fully paid for the work done.

President Truman's Board Condemns Strike

There is an established legal method for handling disputes involving existing written contracts—just as there is such a method of settling any contract dispute which you may have in your daily life.

The President of the United States appointed a Fact Finding Board to investigate and adjust the Missouri Pacific dispute. This Board reported, in part, as follows:

"... it is with a deep sense of regret that we are obliged to report the failure of our mission. It seems inconceivable to us that a coercive strike should occur on one of the nation's major transportation systems, with all of the losses and hardships that would follow, in view of the fact that the Railway Labor Act provides an orderly, efficient and complete remedy for the fair and just settlement of the matters in dispute. Grievances of the character here under discussion are so numerous and of such frequent occurrence on all railroads that the general adoption of the policy pursued by the organizations in this case would soon result in the complete nullification of the Railway Labor Act...."

Obviously the railroads cannot be run efficiently or economically if the leaders of the unions ignore agreements or laws.

Provisions of the Law Which Are Disregarded

There are five ways under the Railway Labor Act to settle disputes over the meaning of contracts:

1—Decision by National Railroad Adjustment Board.
2—Decision by System Adjustment Board for the specific railroad.
3—Decision by arbitration.
4—Decision by neutral referee.
5—Decision by courts.

The Missouri Pacific Railroad has been and is entirely willing to have these disputes settled in accordance with the requirements of the Railway Labor Act. Regardless of this fact, the union leaders have shut down that railroad.

Innocent Bystanders Suffer Losses and Hardships

There are about 5,000 engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen on the Missouri Pacific. They are known as "operating" employes, and are the most highly paid of all employes on the nation's railroads, but their strike action has resulted in the loss of work to 22,500 other employes of the Missouri Pacific. In addition, they have imposed great inconvenience and hardship upon the public and the communities served by that railroad.

The Railway Labor Act was designed to protect the public against just such interruptions of commerce.

If these men will not comply with the provisions of the law for the settlement of such disputes, then all thinking Americans must face the question, "What is the next step?"

Civil Service Status Order to Affect Only Those Actually on Job

That coming executive order to ease the rough road toward regular Civil Service status for about 5000 employes will benefit only those who are otherwise eligible and who are now actually employed.

The proposal, it was learned, has been rewritten to deny covering-in rights to people on furloughs, laid off in reductions of force, etc. You must be actually employed as of the date the order becomes effective to be eligible for status under it.

SEC: Industry has plucked two more of its able employes—at much better salaries. Edward E. Laufer of the trading and exchange division has resigned after 15 years of service with the Securities and Exchange Commission to join a New York investment firm, and John McClaire, an assistant chief accountant, has quit to work for a New York accounting firm.

The SEC, incidentally, has asked Congress for a deficiency appropriation to hire back the 50-odd employes it was forced to lay off several weeks ago.

APPOINTMENT: James Bruce, who resigned recently as Ambassador to Argentina, is a good bet to be appointed administrator of the arms-for-Europe program. He's the brother of our ambassador to France and eventually he may get back into the diplomatic business as ambassador to Britain.

HOUSING CHIEF: Nat S. Keith is another former reporter who is making good in Government administration. He was named yesterday to direct the new $1,500,000,000 slum clearance and urban development program. He has been serving as an assistant to Housing and Home Finance Administrator Ray Foley.

CENSUS CHIEF: Philip Hauser, the acting director of the Census Bureau, is a good bet to be made its permanent boss. He has plenty of competition for the job, but he has something they don't have—the ability and technical know-how for the specialized post. The management of next year's 1951 census will be one of the largest peacetime project attempted by the Government . It is essential that it be in capable and experienced hands.

STORY: Sherman Minton, who was nominated yesterday to serve on the Supreme Court, is indirectly responsible for Harry S. Truman being in the White House.

The story goes back to 1941, when Minton, after having failed to get reelected to the Senate from Indiana, took a job as administrative assistant to President Roosevelt.

In his new job, Minton had to listen to business people and just plain citizens fuss and fume about Army and Navy contracts and the operations of the infant war agencies. A close friend of the then Senator Harry S. Truman, Minton told him of the conversations. The Senator from Missouri had heard similar talk and rumors.

Mr. Truman sat down with friend Minton one afternoon to exchange notes on the problem. At that time, the idea of a Senate committee to check on the progress of the war was born. Minton helped to draft the resolution to create the committee and he insisted from the start that Mr. Truman be appointed its chairman. He also advised the Missouri Senator on how the committee should conduct its investigations.

Mr. Truman's fair and expert handling of the Senate War Investigating Committee made his a national name and he was named Vice President in 1944 as a direct result of it.

The President is indebted to few people for being where he is today and there's one less today by his promotion yesterday of Judge Minton to the Supreme Court.

Boat Crew Rescues Sailor From River

A 19-year-old sailor was fished out of the Potomac River about 11 last night after he either jumped or fell from the S. S. Mount Vernon, returning from a moonlight sail. The sailor, S 1/c Karl Wuff, is a student at Neuro-Fsychiatric Clerical School, Bethesda Hospital.

Quick action by the boat's crew in lowering a boat resulted in his rescue. He was taken to Bethesda Hospital where he was reported resting comfortably. The cruise party was made up of patients and members of the Bethesda Hospital staff.

Accidents Here Wane As Traffic Increases

Auto Offense Arrests Rose Last Month, Statistical Report By Police Discloses

The volume of traffic on District streets is increasing, so are arrests for traffic violations, but accidents are on the wane.

A statistical summary on traffic accidents in the District during the month of August was rereporters made it impossible.

It is the first time the report has been made available to the press. In the past, the labor involved in preparing a large number of copies for distribution to reporters made t impossible.

Now the reports are being turned out on a duplicating machine. A copy of each monthly report will also go to each precinct.

August Figures Compared

The report shows that during August there were 1026 traffic accidents which killed three persons and resulted in injuries to 430 persons. In August, 1948, there were 1060 accidents, four deaths, and 396 injured.

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, in charge of traffic, said there was an 8-per-cent increase in the volume of traffic in the District over last August, and an increase of 20 per cent over August, 1941.

He said accidents have shown a steady decline since the first of the year. He attributed this to better law enforcement and saner driving. He pointed out that while traffic arrests have gone up, accidents have decreased.

All Killed Are Men

During the first eight months of 1949, there have been 8276 accidents, 39 killed and 3498 injured.

Those injured in traffic accidents last month included 257 males and 173 females. All of those killed in traffic last month were males.

The Ninth Precinct led all precincts in the number of accidents with 147, also in the number of injuries, 48.

Safest was the Seventh Precinct, with only 30 accidents.

College Senior Killed As Car Leaves Road

Leonard Low Wild, 21-year-old son of Maj. and Mrs. Robert S. Wild, 2021 Belmont rd. nw., was killed late Wednesday in an automobile accident in the outskirts of Lexington, Va.

Wild was thrown from the convertible in which he was riding as a passenger when the car, out of control, left the road and struck a rock, police said.

The driver of the car, William H. Wade, 25, told police that lights from an approaching car blinded him. Wade was hospitalized for shock and bruises but his condition was not considered serious.

Wild, a senior at Washington and Lee University, was in Lexington for the opening of the school term. He was assistant editor of the university's magazine; on the editorial staff of the daily paper; assistant manager of the football team; president of Alpha Psi Omega, honorary dramatic fraternity; president of the Troubadours, a dramatic group in Lexington, and a member o Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity. He was twice winner of the university's Mahan Award for creative writing and had taken part in radio shows in Lexington and Roanoke.

The only child of Major and Mrs. Wild, he was born in Indianapolis, and was graduated from Shortridge High School in Indianapolis and from the Culver Military Academy.

Funeral services and burial will be in Indianapolis Monday.

Car Breaks Girl's Leg Near Fort Myer Gate

Pearl Tate, 19, of 913 N. Wayne st., Arlington, suffered a broken leg early yesterday morning in an accident on Lee blvd. near the Fort Myer gate.

Police said Miss Tate, a student, was crossing the boulevard when she was struck by a car driven by Joseph C. Dilberto, 34, of 415 N. Thomas st., Arlington.

Their sorority is a business and career girls' organization. One of their activities today will be the placing of a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery

Official Status Again Urged For Race Unit

Clifford H. Newell, past president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, yesterday went before the Commissioners to urge "official" status for the recently formed citizens' interracial committee.

The group, formed last July 27, is cmoposed of 17 Negro and 17 white citizens. Its expressed purpose is to "improve race relations in the Nation's Capital."

Newell first asked the city heads to "officially approve" the interracial group, of which h eis temporary chairman, in a letter dated last August 8.

The Commissioners had a two-hour closed session with Newell yesterday and announced later his suggestion "would be taken under advisement."

On Tuesday Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) of the Senate District Committee announced he plans to introduce a bill to establish a human rights commission for Washington.

The Senator said it would be a representative group with official status.

The proposal for an interracial committee to be set up by law was brought out during the second day of Neely's "idea clinic."

When witnesses reminded Neely of the existing citizens' group, Woolsey Hall, past president of the Federation of Civic Associations, told the Senator, "We have no committee, we never met and if we do I think we (as a committee) are dead."

He has already begun his new duties here, and lives at 6618 31st st. nw.

Fire Chief Given Right to Purchase Fire Alarm Boxes

The Commissioners yesterday reinserted provisions in the District electrical code giving the fire chief complete control over purchase and installation of fire alarm boxes here.

These duties were formerly under supervision of the city electrical engineer until the Commissioners ordered the transfer in 1947.

But through a publicly unexplained mixup, the provisions effecting the jurisdictional shift was not included in the new eleccrical code which was adopted in October, 1948.

In Georgetown

Hearing Set Tuesday in Tree Dispute

The District Highway Department Tuesday will arbitrate a neighborhood dispute between Georgetown's two leading citizens groups over the possible removal of 10 trees.

The Highway Department has made public a plan for widening the dog-leg intersection of Wisconsin ave. and Q st. nw. It will involve cutting down 10 trees, three of which are famed Q st. elms.

Members of the Georgetown Progressive Citizens' Association do not like the idea, and will present city officials with an alternate proposal at a scheduled 3:30 p. m. meeting at the District Building.

But the Georgetown Citizens' Association have no objection to the Highway Department street widening scheme. In fact, they have sent in a letter strongly endorsing it.

Woman Held for Jury On Lottery Charge

Lillian Walker, 26, of 714 6th st. nw. yesterday was ordered held for action of the grand jury on charges of operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips. United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence continued bond at $1500.

She was arrested September 9 in the 300 block of 7th st. se. by vice squad detectives on an arrest warrant, secured after an undercover man had made several plays with her, police said.

Brightwood School Site Shift Planned

Negotiations are under way to transfer the old Brightwood Elementary School, Georgia ave. and Oglethorpe st. nw., from the District to the National Capital Parks for the Fort Drive project.

Under proposals made by the District, the Federal agency would take over the school site and raze the building. The land ultimately is needed as part of the 20-mile-long Fort Drive parkway that will link the city's old Civil War forts.

Paul Chalupsky, District property officer, said the District has no funds to tear down the building abandoned as a school in 1930. The city recently was forced to reject a low bid of $3000 to demolish the school, which is deteriorating and has become a neighborhood nuisance.

If the District and Federal agencies reach agreement on the transfer it will be considered by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission at its three-day meeting beginning Wednesday.

The Land Transfer Act of 1932 requires that the planning group approve all such transfers.

Arlington Girl Burned; In 'Fair' Condition

A 7-year-old Arlington girl, who scalded her left arm and side when she tipped over a pot of boiling water, was in "fairly good" condition yesterday at Arlington Hospital.

She is Virginia Campbell, whose father, George Campbell, is a truck driver at Fort Belvoir. According to hospital authorities, the accident occurred about 5 p. m. yesterday at the child's home, 2745 S. Meade st.,

Area Rescue Squad Speeds Oxygen Mask to D. C. Baby

Because it had the only infant's size oxygen mask immediately availabel in the District area, the Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad made an emergency run into the District last night to relieve spasms of a baby with whooping cough.

The child is Donna Lee Dulaney, 6-week-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl W. Dulaney, 1622 Lane pl. ne.

The father said last night that the tiny girl has had whooping cough for two weeks.

On Wednesday, coughing spells became so bad that oxygen was provided. But the mask accompanying the equipment was too large. By 6 p. m. yesterday, the father, noting the worsening cough, feared for his daughter's life.

When the mask was located, the Bethesda-Chevy Chase group started their run. District motorcycle officers met and escorted them with sirens blowing. Sixteen minutes from the time the squad received the call, the mask was on Donna Lee's face.

Later last night, Dulaney said the child was resting comfortably.

3 Precinct 9 Policemen On Carpet

Pvt. Hurd Going Before Trial Board Today on Charges He's $332 Short

Two more Ninth Precinct police officers face charges before a department trial board, it was disclosed yesterday, as Pvt. Vincent S. Hurd goes before the trial board at 10 a. m. today.

Hurd is charged with a shortage of $332 in his accounts of funds collected for the Metropolitan Police Retiring Association.

The other two officers are Precinct Detective Summerfield B Tillett and Probationary Detective Joseph Bonaccorsy. Capt. Irving Umbaugh, precinct commander said he has recommended that they be charged with failing to turn in promptly property received to the police property clerk.

Inspector Floyd Truscott, acting superintendent of police, said Inspector Robert Pearce, department executive officer and property clerk, is preparing the charges against the two.

Captain Umbaugh disclosed that the forthcoming charges against Tillett and Bonaccorsy are the result of disappearance of evidence in a grand larceny case. He said that an arrest was made in the case, and that money and jewelry were recovered. These, he said, disappeared from the Ninth Precinct station.

Though Capt. Umbaugh and other police executives declined to disclose names involved in the grand larceny case, they said that the man arrested is awaiting trial. They said that they have been advised by the U. S. Attorney's office that disappearance of the money and jewelry evidence will not affect trial of the case.

Search for the missing valuables led to discovery of the shortage in Hurd's accounts, officers said. They said he has admitted dipping into his collections because of domestic financial shortages, and hoped to make the money good from his lump sum payment under the District retroactive pay increase. However, congressional delay in passing the pay measure prevented him from doing so, officers quoted him as saying.

Police officials said that no connection has been discovered between Hurd and the missing evidence.

Policeman Suspended Despite Amnesia Theory

Pvt. Lewis D. Crooke, 31, attached to the Twelfth Police Precinct, was suspended from the force yesterday for being absent without leave.

Capt. Charles Sullivan, commanding officer of the precinct, said that Crooke failed to show up for duty at 4 p. m. Tuesday and could not be located either that day or Wednesday.

Yesterday, Sullivan was informed by Crooke's wife that her husband was at her home at 5160 Benning rd. se. When Sullivan talked to Crooke there later, Crooke stated he remembered nothing since last Monday, which was his regular day off, and that he had apparently suffered an attack of amnesia, according to Sullivan. He lives at 340 13th st. se.

Inspector Floyd E. Truscott, Acting Superintendent of Police, ordered Crooke's suspension pending his visit to a police surgeon for examination. Crooke was appointed to the force July 13, 1942.

Brother, 4, Present

Boy Sought In Shooting Of Playmate

AUBREY JASPER
Shot through neck

A 14-year-old boy, apparently playing Russian roulette with a .38-caliber revolver, shot and seriously injured a 6-year-old playmate shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

In critical condition at Gallinger Hospital is Aubrey Jasper, jr., 309 14th pl. ne., who was playing with a group of youngsters behind his home when the shooting occurred.

Police last night broadcast a lookout for a 14-year-old alleged to have shot Jasper through the neck. They said that the shooting "may have been accidental."

Brother, 4, Is Present

Mrs. Dolores Jasper, his mother, however, said she was not convinced that the shooting was accidental.

The youth's brother, Kenneth Jasper, 4, was with the group when the shot was fired. He ran into the house, yelling that "something's the matter with Aubrey," Mrs. Jasper said.

"I ran out to the alley and saw my son on the stones, bleeding," the distraught woman said. "I took him to the hospital in a neighbor's car."

Detective Sergt. Lionel Couture heard from other children that the 14-year-old was displaying the pistol, spinning the chamber and snapping the trigger. One boy told the officer that the youth had put one bullet in the revolver, spun the chamber, pointed it toward his own head, and clicked the trigger.

Children's Stories Conflict

Other youthful witnesses came up with a variety of stories. Several youngsters in the neighborhood agreed that the boy with the pistol "was showing off." They also said that he had aimed the pistol at another boy, then decided to point it at Aubrey. There was no evidence whether he knew there was a bullet in the chamber, police said.

The 14-year-old fled, Couture said, after the shots. Police ordered a lookout for him, the first bro dcast saying "he was armed and might be dangerous." He had not returned early today to his home, about four blocks from the scene.

The victim had entered the first grade at Lovejoy school this week. His mother is a waitress; his father, a truck driver.

Mayflower Sues Firm for Using Name for Office

The Mayflower Hotel Corp. yesterday asked District Court to prevent Grafton Associates Inc. from using the "Mayflower Office Building" as a name for their new building on Connecticut ave. across DeSales st. nw. from the hotel.

The hotel corporation declared that a substantial part of the hotel is rented for office and commercial uses and that $1,700,000 has been spent in advertising the hotel since 1925, thus giving it exclusive the word "Mayflower."

The Grafton corporation's new office building was completed about two months ago. The hotel corporation also asks for whatever damages the court may deem it has suffered.

Steak Prices In D. C. Near $1 a Pound; Pork Wavers

Survey Reveals Both Meats Are Gaining in Cost Over the Nation

Steaks may have $1-a-pound price tags in another week if present wholesale prices keep climbing, it appeared yesterday.

One big chain advanced prices on porterhouse and sirloin 2 cents to 99 and 95 cents, respectively, and another to 99 for porterhouse. Said one chain spokesman:

"I don't know where that fall price decline is everyone has been predicting. I'd like to know where it is or when it's going to be. It isn't here yet. The way it looks now streaks will be over $1 a pound next week."

A leading supermarket reported no beef price changes "because we bought for a couple of weeks in advance."

The Associated Press weekly food price survey yesterday showed both beef and pork prices edging up all over the Nation. Although trade sources predicted that meat prices would start downward well before the end of the month, there was no indication this week, the AP said, that they have as yet reached a seasonal peak.

Pork price in the Wahington area were up 2 cents a pound on loin at one store but were unchanged at other retailers checked yesterday.

The Agriculture Department estimated that the seasonal drop in hog prices this fall and early winter might be somewhat greater than the 20-year average of 18 per cent because of anticipated heavy marketing. Cattle price declines probably will be smaller, the department said.

Rising coffee prices appear to be headed still higher because of a new record wholesale price this week for coffee beans. The price topped 31 cents a pound, as compared with less than 27 cents last spring and less than 8 cents before the war. Fear of an East Coast dock strike, along with increasing world consumption, was blamed.

Truck Dispute Negotiations Break Down

Negotiations between District trucking firms and some 450 union drivers broke down yesterday, with both sides deadlocked on wages.

Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the labor relations council of the District Trucking Association, reported after the session that the situation was "pretty tight." No further negotiations have been scheduled, he said.

Linwood Trainham, business agent for Truck Drivers Local 639 (AFL), said he would make a report to the union's executive council this morning. "Negotiations have bogged down," he said. "We may be close to walking out now."

Local drivers have been getting $1.15 an hour. They ask a boost of 17 cents an hour.

According to McGarraghy, the trucking firms are willing to pay the 13½-cent hourly increase agreed to by striking Baltimore drivers Wednesay when they returned to work.

Trainham pointed out last night that the Baltimore wage scale had been $1.21½ an hour before drivers there got the 13½-cent increase. The union here, he said, asks the 17-cent jump to bring local drivers within three cents an hour of the Baltimore rate.

Man Held for Jury In Stolen Car Case

Jesse James Gilcrest, of Baltimore, Md., charged with violation of the Dyer Act in transporting a stolen car in interstate commerce, yesterday was held under $2500 bond for grand jury action by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Gilcrest was arrested in Washington September 7, shortly after he allegedly forced Park Policeman Richard Wellman off the road in the Pentagon pattern

Stork Staggers Into Zoo With 120 Pounds of Baby Hippopotamus

City Crosses Fingers He (Or Is It She?) Will Survive

Pinky and Bongo, the celebrated Zoo hippopotamuses, have a new baby. All Washington now can start keeping its fingers crossed hoping it lives.

The infant weighed 120 pounds when born, neen Tuesday. He—the masculine pronoun is tentative at this early stage—is being bottle-fed every three hours, a quart of milk at a time, via syringe.

Fingers are crossed because—and it is painful to have to say this—the 4000-pound Pinky is a bad mother.

She won't nurse her own, and the five babies she has had over a period of many years all have died. Not many bottle-fed hippos survive, but there is hope for the present one.

For one thing he (?) is a picture of leathery-black health, as might be expected from a father born in the African jungle and a mother who was an American circus star. Also, he is considerably above the average new-baby weight of 70 pounds.

Keepers come through the night to feed him, heating the milk to body temperature and testing its warmth on their hands, like for two-legged babies.

Sometimes it is a problem to get him started on his milk, but once started, away he goes, draining the quart with instinctive good manners—almost noiselesly, that is, eight quarts a day. Only his eyes bulge happily. Vocally he spends his day giving small grunts.

He was taken away from his mother as soon as born and placed in a closed-to-the-public building, where a special cradle awaited him: A 4-by-3 oval-shaped pool, 2 feet deep.

So far he has done little more than wet his big pink toes. He hasn't learned yet how much hippos like water.

No one saw his birth, this taking place under water, in the manner of hippos, and the baby promptly starting to swim. The time being noon, the elephant house, where the hippos live, was virtually empty of visitors.

A neat trick was used to recover the baby. Papa Bongo, meeting the historic fate of fathers at such times, was spirited out of the way and locked outdoors. Then the hippo pool was flooded. The baby floated into a dry-land cage.

Pinky's pregnancy was quite obvious, but now she's down to her normal 4000 pounds. Her appetite, as is usual with hippos, waned a bit in the final days, but she is now eating her daily 50 pounds of hay, chopped vegetables and grain.

Yesterday she was wearing her standard, lugubrious, pop-eyed look, a little apologetic, it seemed, for not being the mother she ought to be. But seeming to say, also, that she couldn't help it, she was made that way.

And as she spun her ears in that startling gesture, she seemed to be hoping the baby would live.

It would be a particularly fine thing if it did, because he's the living image of his mother.

Billy Martin, Georgetown Figure, Dies

William G. Martin, a fiery, major league ballplayer as a young man and a part of the color of Old Georgetown in his maturity, died Wednesday afternoon following a stroke.

Since 1934, he had operated a tavern at 1264 Wisconsin ave. He called himself William (Georgetown) Martin, and men like Chief Justice Fred Vinson and House Speaker Rayburn were his guests.

Billy Martin, born in Georgetown and reared there, was an athlete from his school days on. He attended Georgetown Preparatory School and then Georgetown University, where he lettered in baseball, football and basketball.

He broke his leg in the university's last game of the 1914 baseball season. But he was able to go on and played that same year at shortstop and third base for the Boston Braves the only time they ever won the World Series. That was the year George Stalings" "miracle men" went from last place on July 4 to the pennant. Then they took the Philadelphia Athletics in four straight games.

He snapped the leg again in 1915 and the Braves let him go. The New York Giants, under John McGraw, picked him up, but the injury halted his career.

Mr. Martin, who lived at 3940 N. Glebe rd., Arlington, underwent an operation last April, his son, William A. Martin, said last night. He never fully recovered, his son said. His wife, the former Maltha Miller, died a year ago.

Besides his son, who also lives at the Arlington address, Mr. Martin leaves a daughter, Mrs. Leo F. Simpson, jr., of Rochester, N. Y., and four grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. Saturday at St. Agnes Catholic Church, Cherrydale. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

Gonznart

CESAR GONZNART'S Continental Society Orchestra, now at the Mayflower Hotel, came down to earth the other night in answer to a question as to the nature of "society music." "That's the business man's bounce," Gonznart replied.

Business men, too busy to learn to dance, can push their partners around to the slow two-beat. (Jazz has four). If they stop talking and wonder where the next beat is, their cue comes from the melody. A beat, as such, they wouldn't recognize, but the melody they are familiar with. Society music has a slow beat, and the emphasis is on the melody.

But however sympathetic with Mr. Babbitt Gonznart may be, his band is distinctively Latin. When Gonznart sings, the melody is predominant. But the six Cubans can hardly sit still when they turn to the rhumbas and sambas. Sleek, dark, mustachioed, they dance around their instruments.

Gonznart himself puts on an exhibition. He says that people expect that of a Latin band; they want to be entertained. And so he yells like a native, does twists and turns to put mere dancers to shame, to the persistent clang of his unusual percussion instruments.

His men relish it. There's none of the casual boredom present in many American bands, They wouldn't stop playing, you feel, if they had to stop eating.

Actually, all except Gonznart are Tampa born, but of Cuban parentage. "By using these men, the flame of Latin music is there," Gonznart says, "but then again, they feel the American rhythm too. When the Spanish play American music, they are very weak."

Liquor Board Defies Montgomery Council

The Montgomery County Liquor Control Board yesterday ignored the mandate of the County Council to transfer title to the Silver Spring Liquor Dispensary—home of the board—to the council. This promises to place the matter before the Circuit Court.

The council, in its legislative session last May, enacted a county measure requiring the liquor body to transfer the title before September 15, yesterday.

J. Forest Walker, board chairman, said after yesterday's board meeting that the refusal to transfer title was based on an opinion of the board's attorney, James W. Gill, that the act may be unconstitutional.

Court Decision Awaited

The act is similar in content to a bill introduced in the State Legislature last April by Republican State Senator Roy Tasco Davis. The bill failed of passage.

Walker said the board decided to await a decision by the courts on the constitutionality of the act. He added that if it is upheld "the board will promptly and gladly comply with said act."

The practical effect of the bill, according to Walker, is to permit the county manager to set any desired rental for the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission which occupies offices in the dispensary building. At present the parks body pays the costs of maintenance and upkeep, including lighting and heating, in lieu of rent under an agreement made by the liquor board.

Points to Charter

The possibility of the act's unconstitutionality stems from the fact that the board is a State agency appointed by the Governor, operating solely under State law without county supervision, W[illegible] said. He also pointed to the charter prohibition against passing any law pertaining to the sale or distribution of alcoholic beverages.

Council President Frederic P. Lee, informed of the board's decision, said the matter would be referred to David Macdonald, the attorney, for determination of a course of action.

Woman Loses $70 To Purse-Snatcher

Lucy C. Scott, 613 Kenilworth ter. se., told police yesterday she tussled unsuccessfully with a purse-snatcher Wednesday night at Kenilworth ter., and J st. se.

She said she alighted from a bus and was approached by the man who attempted to take her handbag from her left arm. In the struggle, she said, she dropped her wallet containing $70. She said the man struck her on the head with his fist, scooped up the wallet, and ran.

Yanks Lose to Indians, 10-6; Lead Shaved to 2½

This Morning
—With Shirley Povich

Notes Off the Cuff:

NEXT MONTH'S Army-Fordham game at West Point is the first between those two institutions, and then again it isn't. In 1891, the two schools met on the West Point plains when Fordham was known as St. John's College. Army won, 10 to 6.

From up Philadelphia way, a reader takes a dim view of the Redskins' chances to head off the Eagles for the Eastern Division title in the National Football League, and he writes with some logic: "Giving the Redskins the best of it, they will lose only four games this season—two to the Eagles, and one each to the Bears and Cardinals. That adds up to too many defeats, however. To whom are the Eagles going to lose four games?" I dunno.

POVICH

The death of Ernie Bonham evokes a pang among the admirers of the old Yankees. Big Tiny Bonham was pitching alongside Lefty Gomez and Red Ruffing when the clamor "Break up the Yankees" was being heard. He never had the speed of either Gomez or Ruffing, but he had a fork ball that was the only one of its kind in the league, and when he walked as many as two men he was having a bad day with his control.

If North Carolina U. gets no Sugar Bowl bid this season, with its $100,000 guarantee, the Tar Heel athletic treasury will be able to struggle along nevertheless. With box seats for its Notre Dame game at Yankee Stadium not only selling at $7.80, but already sold out, Carolina will come away from the game with an estimated net profit of $125,000. Its Sugar Bowl net was never more than $40,000, after expenses.

JIM McNALLY, former Marine veteran, sets the record straight for this department which referred to the late Frank Goettge as the victim of a sniper's bullet on Guadalcanal. "Colonel Goettge was ambushed in a dirty Jap trick as was the rest of his party while arranging for a Jap surrender under a white flag of truce."

On the betting front: The Redskins are three-point favorites over the Packers on Sunday; the Eagles seven-point choices over the Bears, Detroit seven points over the Giants, San Francisco 17 points over the Los Angeles Dons, and Cleveland Browns 14 points over the New York Yankees. The rub is, you lay your favorite betting commissioner 6 to 5 on any bet.

At least one of the Nats has retained his sense of humor amid the glum futility of the Washington club. When only 1406 customers showed up for the game with the White Sox the other night, Pitcher Mickey Harris, suggested to his teammates: "Come on, guys, let's give these fans a big round of applause. They deserve it."

For the Boston newspaper that is running a contest to determine the most valuable player on the Red Sox, last Wednesday's contest with the Tigers solved nothing. Ellis Kinder, running neck and neck with Ted Williams, turned in a 1-0 shutout, but it was Williams' home run that won the game.

WEST POINT'S Cadets are wondering why football players are called the pampered darlings of the campus. The 54-man Cadet squad is out of bed at 5:50 a. m., to start a 12-hour day of study to which is tacked an hour and a half of football practice.

Marquette's guard, Bernie Berigan, is faster than many of the backs on the varsity squad. Asked if his speed was hereditary, Berigan flabbergasted his interviewers by saying: "Yes, it's hereditary. I got my speed from my mother. She was a member of the boys track team at Ainsworth (Nebr.) High School."

Professional football made its debut in New York in 1902, before a crowd of 3500 in case you're interested. The game was played, of all places, indoors at the old Madison Square Garden with an All-Syracuse team beating New York, 5-0, in the days when touchdowns counted three points.

Perhaps the finest tribute ever inscribed to a football player was offered in praise of Charlie Justice, even though it was on a slightly macabre note. Wrote Herbert Foster, covering the Southern Conference scene for the United Press: "They're calling this Wake Forest's year in the Southern Conference, if Carolina's Charlie Justice will only drop dead."

Against Packers Sunday

'Skins Leave for Last Warmup Without Injured Eddie Saenz

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Eddie Saenz, hard luck kid of the Washington Redskins, will not go along today when his teammates entrain for their final 1949 warmup game Sunday against the Green Bay Packers in Milwaukee.

But the veteran halfback flash, his cheek bone fractured in a freak practice field accident, has been assured of action by September 26, when the 'Skins open their National Football League season against the Cardinals in Chicago's Comiskey Park.

Eddie will fly to Evanston, Ill., on Monday in time to rejoin the squad for a week's drill before the Cardinal game. This is the second time he has been away from his team this year, a tonsil operation sidelining him for the first week of fall training on the West Coast.

Last year the 168-pound ace was even more unlucky. After two brilliant seasons to start his pro career, during which he carried the ball 106 times for 356 yards, caught 46 passes for 840 yards, and returned 40 kickoffs for 1056 yards and two touchdowns, Eddie broke his leg in the Skins' first exhibition outing in 1948. He missed eight games in 1948.

Though they all will make the trip, three other players will see little if any action Sunday. Slingin' Sammy Baugh will turn most of the passing duties over to Harry Gilmer, as much to give his understudy more experience as to nurse his bruised ribs. Len. Szafaryn, rookie tackle, has a pulled leg muscle that may leave him idle, and Laurie Niemi, another rookie tackle, is still limping on a swollen ankle.

Bert Bell, N. F. L. Commissioner, and Redskin Owner George Marshall yesterday made their annual trip to the White House to present a gold season pass to all National Football League games to President Truman . . . So far the President has received five football passes—and hasn't seen a game . . . Bell was in town just long enough to make the presentation and predict a "close race" in his league . . .

2 Board Members Charge

Principals Retard High School Sports

The Interhigh athletic program is not going forward, and the principals are to blame, two Board of Education members charged yesterday.

One of them, Albert Steinem declared, "Too much authority has been given to the principals, and the program is not going forward."

The rules committee backed up Steinem by recommending that Board President C. Melvin Sharpe appoint a separate committee to investigate the sports program in the schools.

At present, an athletic council, comprising delegates appointed by the principals, draws the interhigh schedules and suggests policies. The principals have the final word on approval, revision or veto.

"Let's Dignify Sports"

The Board of Education keeps tabs on the athletic situation through the student activities committee, which also controls essay contests, cadets and scholarship awards.

"I've been on the board for more than a year, and have yet to hear a recommendation for improvement of the athletic program, and it needs improvement," declared Steinem.

"Athletics are left to the interest or lack of interest of the principals," said Adelbert Lee, Southeast businessman, and a member of the rules committee. "Let's dignify the sports program with a separate board committee.

"The committee would set up policy, rules and procedures and blueprint a better plan for administrating sports," said Lee.

Boosts Night Football

Steinem suggested that more interest is shown in promoting sports as a community affair "so that the program will make a better showing.

"More consideration should be given to night football. Other cities are helping to finance their programs with night football," said Steinem.

In the past year the principals have rejected plans to erect lighting plants at Central and Eastern High School. And the Interhigh League treasury is estimated at less than $350.

Dr. Philip Johnson, a member of the rules committee, pointed out that football players are not properly protected. "Often there are no doctors at the games."

Norman Nelson, assistant superintendent of schools, refuted Johnson, saying: "A doctor is assigned to each game."

Dr. Johnson quickly replied, "Then why is it that special calls go out for a doctor when a player is injured?"

Corning Opposes New Board

Immediate target of the criticism was Dr. Hobart Corning, superintendent of schools. He opposed appointment of the new committee because:

1. The eight-man board already has eight standing committees and a new group would necessitate one board member's taking over chairmanship of two committees.

2. Governing athletics is not the function of the board. Athletics are a part of the curriculum and should be conducted by the principals.

Hogan Causes Row Protesting British Clubs

By Robert Musel

Ganton, Eng., Sept. 15 (U.P.)—Ben Hogan, nonplaying captain of the United States Ryder Cup golf team, precipitated a raging controversy on the eve of the big international matches tonight by objecting to a number of the clubs used by the British players.

In one of the most surprising incidents in Ryder Cup history, Hogan protested to British Captain Charles Whitcombe that the faces of the Britons' club had been filed or ground down to give them better control of their approach shots to the lightning fast Ganton course greens.

The protest, which followed an hour-long examination of the British clubs by Hogan and Ed Dudley, honorary co-captain of the United States team, evoked a great deal of bitterness from the Britons.

"I suppose I should throw my clubs away and play with some old wooden clubs just to satisfy them," said Charley Ward, one of Britain's competitors in tomorrow's opening matches.

Hogan protested that the entire set of clubs used by Dick Burton, former British Open champion, should be disqualified. Burton objected so strenuously that Hogan agreed to have Bernard Darwin, honorary secretary of the British golf rules committee, examine the clubs later and abide by his decision.

When a reporter asked whether the Americans' clubs also were being examined, Art Lees of the British team replied, "Oh, they say their clubs are all right."

The Associated Press reported Hogan and Whitcombe both said that all the clubs being used by the Americans were strictly legal—a legacy from the last renewal of the matches at Portland, Oreg., in November, 1947.

At that time, Henry Cotton, testy captain of the British team, forced almost the whole American squad to file down the faces of their clubs.

Ward, a member of the 1947 and 1949 British teams cracked tonight that "the Americans are just getting even with us for last time. If Cotton hadn't been so nasty in 1947, we'd all be getting along all right."

Several of the British Ryder cuppers immediately set to work filing the grooves out of their clubs.

Schroeder, Parker Win

Los Angeles, Sept. 15 (AP).—Veterans Ted Schroeder and Frankie Parker won their way today into the semifinals of the annual Pacific Southwest tennis championships.

Wimbledon Champion Schroeder, from nearby La Crescenta, disposed of young Herb Flam of Los Angeles, 6—4, 1—6, 7—5, 6—2. Parker was impressive with his placements in defeating Earl Cochell of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—4, 75.

Already installed in the semifinal bracket were National Champion Richard Gonzales and South Africa's Eric Sturgess.

Gonzales and Sturgess will meet in a featured center-court match tomorrow and Parker and Schroeder hook up Saturday.

The women's singles semifinals will find Doris Hart, Jacksonville, Fla., playing Mrs. Hele Pastall Perez of Los Angeles Saturday and Beverly Barker, Santa Monica, Calif., playing Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, tomorrow.

Billy Martin, Ex-Brave, Dies

William G. (Billy) Martin, who came off the Georgetown campus and helped the Boston Braves' "miracle team" win the 1914 National League pennant, died here yesterday. He was 55.

At the time of his death, he was proprietor of Martin's Tavern, 1264 Wisconsin ave. nw., a favorite meeting place for Washington's athletes.

The Braves signed Martin in 1914 after his graduation at Georgetown, where he starred in football and basketball as well as shortstop on the baseball team. He was a utility infielder on George Stallings' Boston team which came from last place in midseason to capture the pennant and World Series.

Later, Martin played for the New York Giants under famous John J. McGraw.

Martin lived at 3940 N. Glebe rd., Arlington.

Berwyn Wins, 3-2, For Boys Club Title

Berwyn defeated Oxon Hill, 3-2, yesterday at Greenbelt and won the Prince Georges County Boys Club baseball title. Bill Hardy pitched four-hit ball and received credit for the win.

Bonham, 36, Dies After Appendectomy

Pittsburgh, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Ernest (Tiny) Bonham, the big fork ball specialist who helped pitch the New York Yankees to three American League pennants, died today of complications which developed following an appendectomy.

The 36-year-old right hander, who had won seven games and lost four with the Pittsburgh Pirates this year, died of a cardiac collapse at 11:45 a. m. (EDT). His wife, who had flown here from Sacramento, Calif., was at his bedside in Presbyterian Hospital.

Bonham, who weighed 215 pounds and stood 6 feet, 2, complained of abdominal pains during the Pirates last road trip.

Bonham

Last Thursday he was operated on and the operation was complicated by an intestinal disorder, requiring three hours, his condition was then listed as critical.

He appeared to be recovering, but last night he suffered a relapse. He was placed in an oxygen tent early this morning.

Bonham's greatest year was in 1942 when he won 21 games while losing but five.

Born in Ione, Calif., August 16, 1913, Bonham broke into organized baseball in 1935 with the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League. He also played with Akron, Binghamton, Newark and Kansas City before the Yankees brought him up in 1940. He won nine games, while losing three that season and the next year his mark was nine and six. But in the world series that year, he pitched the fifth game against Brooklyn Dodger Ace Whitlow Wyatt and beat him 3 to 1 to give the Yankees the series.

"There was never a better pitched ball game," said Bill Dickey, who caught him that day.

He also pitched in the 1942 series against the Cardinals, but was beaten by Johnny Beazley, 4 to 3. In 1943, he won 15 games for the Yankees, but lost some tough decisions to Mort Cooper and the Cardinals, 4 to 3.

In 1944, he won 12 games for the Yankees, dropped to eight victories in 1945 and five in 1946.

Plagued several times with a variety of ailments, Bonham believed his baseball career was at an end in 1941 when a back condition made it almost impossible for him to move. He rounded into form, however, and was a mainstay on the Yankee pitching staff.

Nats Will Use Scarborough On Contenders

Ray Scarborough, whose victory over the Red Sox on the next to the last day of the season last year cost Boston the pennant, may also determine who'll win this year's flag.

The curveballing Nats righthander, 4-3 conqueror of the league-leading Yankees last Saturday, will be saved exclusively for pennant contending clubs from here in, Nat Vice President Calvin Griffith announced last night.

Bidding for his twelfth victory, Scarborough starts his chore tonight, facing the Cleveland Indians in the opener of a two-game set at Griffith Stadium.

He'll be opposed by Mike Garcia, who will be seeking his fourteenth success.

Scarborough's next assignment will be against the New York Yankees and his third job is against Boston.

Although they're 6½ games back, the Indians are still in the race.

Kirby, Bauer Hit Semifinal

Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Mark A. Porter of Manoa, Pa., reached the semifinals of the forty-ninth Women's National golf tournament today by overwhelming Janet Brown of Philadelphia, 7 to 6, in their 18-hole match at the Merion Golf Club.

Little Marlene Bauer of Los Angeles, National Girls' champion, continued to shoot some of the best golf of the tournament as she defeated Betty MacKinnon, dark horse entrant from Texarkana, Ark., 4 and 2.

Dot Kirby of Atlanta, Ga., twice a runner-up, ran up against a tartar in the unsung Mrs. John L. Hulteng of Rumford, R. I., Rhode Island champion and former Pacific Northwest titleholder, but the Georgia girl eked out a one up victory on the nineteenth green.

Dot Kielty, Long Beach, Calif., was the last to reach the semifinal round. She was carried to the nineteenth hole before she eliminated Polly Riley, Fort Worth, Tex., 1 up.

5 New York Errors Help Bob Lemon Win 20th

New York Sept. 15 (AP).—The New York defense collapsed today, the Yankees committing five errors, and the Cleveland Indians made the most of the miscues as they rolled up a 10-6 triumph.

The setback cut the Yanks' American League advantage over the Boston Red Sox to 2½ games.

Bob Lemon received credit for his twentieth victory but needed help from big Al Benton in the eighth.

Yanks Blow 2-0 Lead

The Indians spotted the Yanks two runs in the first inning on Phil Rizzuto's double, a ground out, a walk, error and fly ball before Cleveland reached pay dirt against Allie Reynolds in the third.

Cleveland loaded the bases in the third without a hit and before a man was retired. Rizzuto's error, a fielder's choice and a sacrifice and fielder's choice jammed the bases.

Dale Mitchell grounded out, one run scoring on he play. Lou Boudreau following with a single to right to score Jim Hegan with the tying run but Mickey Vernon grounded into a double play to end the rally.

Larry Doby smashed his twenty-second homer in the sixth inning to break the tie and the Indians were never headed.

Indians Cuff Reynolds

The Indians slammed Reynold for five runs in the eighth inning to take a commanding 8-2 lead. With two out and two on via walks, the Indians rapped Reynolds for five straight singles before Lemon fanned to end the rally.

Apparently the rally cooled off Lemon, for the Yanks quickly tagged the righthander for four runs in their half to get back into the ball game.

Lemon walked Rizzuto to start the eighth and Cliff Mapes followed with a line drive homer into the rightfield stands. Bobby Brown flied out and Joe DiMaggio followed with a grounder to Boudreau but as the shortstop was ready to field the ball, it took a hop and sailed past Boudreau's right ear into left center field. Yogi Berra followed with a homer into the Yankee bull pen in right and Lemon was through.

Benton nailed the next two batters and the Indians gave Benton two more runs in the ninth on Bobby Brown's two-base error, a single, sacrifice and another one-bagger. Benton retired the Yanks on one hit in the ninth.

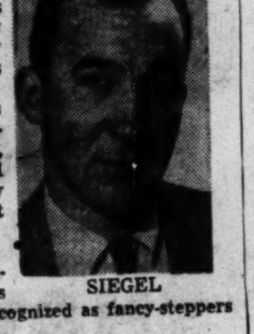
Justice Heads Area's Top Runners

Editor's Note: This is another series of articles on 11 leading college football teams of this area. Morris Siegel discusses outstanding players on various squads. Today's feature deals with the running backs.

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

BUTCH SLAUGHTER, assistant football coach at Virginia, was explaining to a group of friends why the Cavalier fullback, Johnny (Rapid) Papit, was such an excellent runner.

"The simplest explanation I can give you," said Michigan's All-American guard of 25 years ago, "is that he runs like hell with that football."



SIEGEL

The same can be said of North Carolina's Charlie Justice, William and Mary's Jack Cloud, George Washington's Andy Davis, Duke's Jack Friedlund and Billy Cox, Georgetown's Billy Conn and VPI's Sterling Wingo.

There are others, mostly sophomores such as Navy's Frankie Hauff and Maryland's Mo Modzelewski, but Justice, Cloud, Papit, Davis and the rest gave football crowds more than one run for their money last fall and can be counted on to do it again next fall.

FOR ALL-AROUND running performance, you can't top Justice, and that goes for Doak Walker and the rest who are recognized as fancy-steppers of no little ability.

Choo-Choo is an exciting and unusually skilled stepper. He's not the fastest man in the land, but he's so adroit at cutbacks, shiftiness and changes of pace that what little he lacks in speed is more than made up for in these other departments.

He rammed into the line, off tackle or around end 147 times last year and averaged 5.2 yards each trip.

On punt returns, there's none finer than Justice of Carolina. In the Tar Heel opener against Georgia last year, for instance, he zigged and zagged his way 84 yards for a touchdown and in the season's finale he raced through the Virginia defenses for 80 yards on one trip and came back shortly with a 52-yard scoring journey.

ONCE AGAIN, when it comes to tabbing one back as tops in the area, you can't get away from Choo-Choo.

Restricting the field to fullbacks, William and Mary's Jack Cloud is the standout. Here, friends, is a fullback of the old school, one that puts his head down and splits the line wide open.

Jim Jackson, who only recently became publicity director at William and Mary, saw Cloud on the move in two scrimmages and in his best public relations manner described the 210-pound Oklahoma-born part Indian this way:

"Can outplunge a Paris neckline . . .

"Efficiency expert . . . he eliminates the middle man."

Rube McCray, W & M coach, who's seen and coached many a fine fulback in his day, pulls out all the stops when he speaks of his 210-pound ace.

"Best of 'em all," drawls Rube, and he means it.

Clyde (Smackover) Scott had a few brushes with Doc Blanchard in Army-Navy competition, but Scott met up with Cloud in the 1948 Dixie Bowl game and immediately tabbed him "better than Blanchard."

Heretofore, W & M has restricted Cloud to running inside,

122 Games This Weekend

UCLANS Face Santa Clara In Week's Football Feature

New York, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The 1949 college football season is ready for its first big weekend with 122 games listed with the debut of California's Rose Bowlers against rugged Santa Clara in the feature event.

Rated the best of the West Coast independents, Santa Clara pointed for the first upset of the infant season at Berkeley in Saturday's major test.

The coast elevens also offered the best Friday night program as Oregon State opens the Pacific Coast Conference slate against UCLA and independent St. Mary's plays host to Oregon, last year's conference cochampion. In the South tomorrow night, Furman meets Georgia's refurbished Southeastern Conference champs and Mississippi plays at Memphis State.

Breathers were the order of the day Saturday in most of the early tuneups but three top tilts on tap sent Villanova into the Southwest against the Texas Aggies; Texas Christian into the midlands against Kansas, and Duquesne into the South against Wake Forest.

Texas, one of the Southwest Conference favorites, faced difficulty against usually tough Texas Tech but the other "powers" throughout the Nation were starting with mild opposition.

William and Mary plays at Houston in the South, while Kentucky moves against Mississippi Southern and Clemson's Southern Conference champs should not be extended by Presbyterian.

Stanford's coast darkhorses have a breather against San Jose State, while Washington's Huskies meet Utah and Washington State rolls against Utah State.

Each Wins Two to Reach Third Round

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Bobby Brownell, Manor, and Ralph Bogart, Chevy Chase, advanced toward an expected final round meeting tomorrow with two wins apiece yesterday at Kenwood Country Club in the District Amateur championship.

Brownell, slender former Duke University golf star, defeated Doug Jackson, 5 and 4 in the morning's opening round and finished off Gene Pittman, Congressional, 6 and 4, in the second round. Brownell was one over par for the day, going two over in the morning and one under in the afternoon.

Bogart, meanwhile, was getting quite a scare from Charlie Price in the opening round before finally downing the Kenwood amateur, 1-up. Price missed only three greens during the round while Bogart was constantly in trouble before scrambling back into contention.

Price was having trouble with his putter, however, and when he missed an 8-footer on the seventeenth he was one down and a halve on the last hole closed out the match.

Bogart was short on the eighteenth while Price reached the green in two but Bogart chipped up three feet from the pin for a par and Price missed his try for a birdie three.

Bogart won his afternoon match, 5 and 4, defeating Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood, who had scored a mild upset when he ousted Eddie Ault, Indian Spring, 1 up, in the morning round.

Philadelphia, Sept. 15 (AP).—Signing of Jim Nolan, Georgia Tech's high scorer last season, by the Philadelphia Warriors of the National Basketball Association was announced today.

Grand Opening Today

Anacostia-Gonzaga Heads High's 8 Game Football Card

A week ahead of the Washington area colleges, the high schools kick off their football season today with eight games. Six of the games are at night.

Feature afternoon game finds Gonzaga playing at Anacostia at 3:15. Gonzaga jumped the gun last week and smothered Mount Vernon of Alexandria, 326, giving promise of an even better season than last year when the Eagles won the unofficial Catholic title.

The two biggest public high schools in northern Virginia, George Washington of Alexandria and Washington-Lee of Arlington open at night on their home fields. G. W. is expected to draw 8000 fans when it tackles Mount Vernon at 8, and W-L should attract about 4500 as it entertains Fort Hill of Cumberland.

First District public high school to see action is Roosevelt, which makes its bow under new coach Pete Labukas at Martinsburg, W. Va., in a night game. Roosevelt beat Martinsburg in its opener last season, and then won only one game afterward.

In the other 3:15 game, Sidwell Friends plays at National Training School. At night, St. John's plays at LaSalle of Cumberland, Handley of Winchester plays Falls Church at Fairfax, and Parker-Gray entertains its alumni at Alexandria's Municipal Stadium. The night games start at 8 p. m.

Eastern High starts its season Saturday as it plays at York, Pa., and Wilson plays at Fairfax under the lights.

Bungalese Beats Gunner in Sprint Headliner at Marlboro

Bill Bennings

AT MARLBORO

DEAR FOLKS: The new Marlboro may be modern and even swanky in some appointments but it hasn't moved entirely out of the country fair class in the minds of at least one group of customers who appeared with wicker baskets, thermos bottles, etc., and staged a heavy-eating picnic before the first race. Jockey Ray Arduini of Washington was forced to cancel his mounts, having injured his shoulder in a paddock accident. When $46,589 was bet on the fifth race, the largest single event handle thus far, it proved too much for the tote. The usually reliable mechanical device broke down in the win pool. During the interval the place and show windows did a land office business. See you on the rail . . . BILL.

Third Money Captured by Kitty Kilts

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Marlboro, Md., Sept. 15.—Mrs. R. E. Benton's Bungalese, a daughter of Bull Moose, bulled her way to her fourth victory of the year, in the featured Solomons Island Purse here today.

Breaking on top, but swerving into horses from her No. 7 position, Bungalese led at every jump of the 5½ furlongs.

The 7-year-old mare, however, was stopping as if she were shot at the end and lasted by a neck margin before the charge of S. H. Rogers' Gunner, one of the horses that suffered from early interference. Third money went to Teaville Farms' Kitty Kilts, also crowded in the first furlong.

Odds-On Favorite

Bungalese was installed an odds-on favorite by the estimated gathering of 7,000 fans. She returned a $3.40 mutuel and was clocked in 1:09 1/5 over the first fast track since the opening last Monday.

Jockey Patsy Grant was aboard the winner which carried top weight of 116 pounds in the field of eight seasoned sprinters.

Bungalese had Simite closest to her in the early stages with Gunner third and Kitty Kilts fourth. In her accustomed style, Bungalese drew far out. However, in the stretch she became leg weary and Grant was forced to ride her to the limit to hold Gunner safe at the end.

The program was delayed for more than a half hour between the fifth and sixth races when the totalisator went berserk. The betting apparatus failed in the win and combination divisions. When the race finally was history the mutuel department announced that $48,572 was wagered, the highest total for a single race thus far at the meeting.

A lukewarm horse and a favorite teamed to produce a $25.40 pay-off on the daily double combination of 3 and 5. Jockey Sammy Palumbo put up one of his better rides to win the opener with S. M. Ball's Real Wren at $8.20. In the second race, Apprentice Nolan Griffith booted C. F. Hovis' Easter Bonnie, a $6.60 shot, to the wire.

Farmington, Suitland Shows This Weekend

By Harry De Mawby Jr.

The Farmington, Va., Hunt Club Horse Show Saturday and Sunday and the Mount Calvary Catholic Church's horse show, on J. B. Blands' Farm, Suitland, Md., Sunday, are the focal points for area horsemen on the coming weekend.

The seventeenth annual exhibition of the popular Farmington Hunt Club lists 35 classes with the Saturday session starting at 9 a. m. (EST.) Sunday's performances will be confined to the afternoon with the first class scheduled for 12 noon.

The program includes a breeding division; green, conformation, and working hunter divisions; open jumper, junior and a miscellaneous division consisting of a lead line, family class, member class, owner-rider event, and the hunt team exhibition. Of particular interest to the exhibitors who are planning to enter the National competition in November is the use of the Madison Square Garden Course "K" in five of the conformation and working hunter events.

Judges for Farmington's two-day show, which is expected to draw many of the top horses shown recently at Keswick and Warrenton, will be W. Brock Fuller, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. Newell J. Ward, Middleburg, Va., and Louis J. Collister, Gates Mills, Ohio.

The Suitland (Md.) show is the sixth renewal sponsored by the Mount Calvary Catholic Church and has 21 classes scheduled for a long day of showing starting at 10 a. m. Ponies will be shown in eight classes in the morning, followed by a junior division of three classes, then the hunters and jumpers will take over with five events for each. Championship and reserve awards will be made in the pony, hunter and jumper divisions.

A $50 stake class for both hunter and jumper divisions are the day's features and in addition to the prize money in each class an additional $25 and $5 will be given to the champion and reserve horses, in each division, respectively.

George P. Edel, McDonough, Md.; Norman Haymaker, Berryville, Va., and Thomas J. Trodden of Washington, will judge the show

Daughtry Meets Harley in Bout on Bunn-Perry Card

Leon Daughtry, former Golden Glover who has won his last five professional fights, has been signed for a special five-round fight against Gene Harley on the Sonny Boy Bunn-Aaron Perry card at Joe Turner's Arena Monday night.

Daughtry has been climbing steadily up the ladder and in his last appearance here handily outpointed Lee Stoner. Harley was considered among the possible opponents for Perry before Bunn was landed.

Daughtry makes the second Gloves champion signed for the card, Pat Thomas agreeing to terms two days ago. Thomas has won his last three fights by knockouts.

Women's Publinx Starts Next Monday

Enties for the District Women's Public Links championship will be accepted at Fort Dupont golf course until noon Sunday. The championship starts Monday with a nine-hole qualifying round.

How far is down? This is IT! We're flabbergasting the competitors with our 1948-49 price too low (only 50% above prewar, as against 63% to 149% for other brands!). And now this low Coast-to-Coast price is even lower, making Regals America's Outstanding Shoe Value.

How does your shoe dollar work so hard for you at Regal? For one thing, Regals are built on the same lasts as those used in shoes selling for 2 to 3 times as much. For another, Regal eliminates middleman profits by selling direct to you. For other reasons, ask for our Fact Sheet at your nearest Regal store.

Mattingly, Deacon and Juen—

3 Sophs Key to Georgetown's T

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

THREE UNTRIED sophs will make—or break—Georgetown's football season.

Fighting for the vital quarterback spot in the Hoyas' T-formation are Frank Mattingly, Bob Deacon and Jackie Juen. At the mement, they're rated in that order.

Not to be discounted is Bob Barry, Chicago senior with varsity experience. But those throwing arms of Mattingly and Deacon are being counted upon to offset the absence of a strong running game.

And Mattingly was completing tosses in a manner the Georgetown coaches fervently hope won't be duplicated by the Crusaders.

Frank's the tallest of the trio, 6 foot 4, but is slender at 180 pounds. Long passes are his specialty but he's going to have to hand off the ball more smoothly on running plays.

Mattingly has an edge, too, in having played quarterback in the "T" at nearby Charlotte Hall. He did so well that Maryland, Tulane and Navy, among others, were anxious to have him further his education at their institutions.

Deacon, all-Jersey and all-Metropolitan New York schoolboy back at Montclair High and St. Benedict's Prep, is right behind Mattingly. Potentially, he has the ability to outshine his two competitors.

Deacon, too, was in great demand when he left prep school. He nearly enrolled at Maryland and weighed Georgia and Miami, Fla., offers.

Unquestionably, Mattingly and Deacon are superlative passers. If they ripen quickly enough, Georgetown's going to surprise somebody. That if is keeping Bob Margarita awake these nights.

Jackie Juen is the boy who looks the part. The Belleville, Ill., lad is 6 feet 3 inches and goes 195. He's ahead of the other two on ball handling, but his passing isn't as sharp.

Juèn won 14 letters at his southern Illinois school and was an All-State basketball selection. He probably will play for the Hoya quintet this year, but right now he's thinking only of football.

One thing's sure, no matter who gets the job there will be no hard feelings. The sophomore trio is buddy-buddy. The boys pal around together and, on occasion, have gone on triple dates.

5 New Players Join CU Squad

Catholic University's football squad was up to 41 with the registering of five men yesterday. Working out for the first time were Tailback Jim Yacobi, End John Murphy, Halfback Ed Kozanplick, Tackle Tony Unanue and Guard George Ellis.

The Cardinals continued their two-a-day workouts with a one-hour scrimmage yesterday at the Brookland field.

Visit St. Louis—there's a lot to see and do here. And visit the Home of Budweiser. See for yourself why Budweiser is one of America's very few true lager beers. True lagering means ageing much, much longer than the 15 to 30 days allotted to ordinary beers. It's your guarantee against green or bitter beer... your guarantee of the ultimate in mellow taste and fragrant bouquet... the very essence of America's costliest barley, southern rice and domestic and imported hops. Seeing is believing... and tasting is testing. Treat yourself to a bottle of Budweiser today. There's nothing like it... absolutely nothing.

All Is Shipshape For Cup Regatta

By Happy Walker

THE CURTAIN will be raised tomorrow at 11:20 a. m. on the first act of the 1949 production of the President's Cup Regatta.

The stage, a nature-made amphitheater along seawalls of the Potomac River above Hains Point, is in readiness to take care of thousands of spectators.

At Regatta headquarters in the Willard, all is hustle and bustle. Behind the scenes, technicians, committee chairmen and boss producer, Chuck Gardiner, check over last minute details to preclude any slipups in final plans.

Meanwhile, the river front is teeming with activity. The U. S. Coast Guard dispatches the Nemesis, with crew of 44 aboard, to the Committee Boat position. The Mistletoe, manned with 45 able seamen, take on the buoy and course maintenance job. Six picket boats, two rescue boats, six Harbor Police craft and three Coast Guard Auxiliary cutters scurry about to assigned spots. Veteran Commander F. G. Wild and Captain Otha Sanders, plus 125 officers and men are set to carry out their tasks.

Along the seawall, Reviewing Chairman Ben Treadwell has erected 4000 reviewing stand seats and 200 box seats. There are still some seats available at regatta headquarters.

In the Willard Hotel lobby, the well-guarded $25,000 worth of trophies and platterware were put on display yesterday, the results of Trophy Chairman Jack Blank's untiring efforts. The President's Cup, the John Charles Thomas Trophy, the Mexican Hat Trophy and hundreds of shiny mugs are ready for presentation time.

Drawn from racing's star-studded field and playing the leading Gold Cup roles will be Dan Arena, Bill Cantrell, Chuck Thompson, Harry Lynn, Guy Lombardo, George Sarant, Flash Pearson, Mel Crook, Harold Wilson and Clarence Clarke.

On hand to open tomorrow's show will be the crack outboard racing drivers of the Nation including Doug Creech, Henry Shakeshaft, Don Whitfield, Ray Lucas, Nick Allen, jr., Vic Scott, Ike Hale and Ray Schilling.

Walker Rates 'Em

Boating Columnist Happy Walker has come up with a dope sheet, giving the odds on the Gold Cup entries in the President's Cup races. Walker, long-time personal friend of many of the drivers and an on-the-spot observer for 20 years, sizes up the million dollar Gold Cup field.

COLLEGE—From P. B-4

but now they're going to take advantage of the big fellow's speed. They've installed several outside running plays for their swift battering rams and have also moved him from linebacker, where he was one of the best, to defensive halfback so he can snare enemy passes.

He's scored 35 touchdowns for W & M in three years, all through the middle on jaunts from 44 yards to one inch. He's made the All-Southern for three straight years and as a sophomore in 1947 he was named on the New York Sun's and Look Magazine's All-America.

Virginia Head Coach Art Guepe, who sparked a Marquette team to the Cotton Bowl several years ago, is sold on his boy Rapid Papit.

"He ranks with the best. We run him inside, outside and all over the field. Blocking helps him, but he doesn't really need it. When he can't run away from a tackler, he runs over him."

PAPIT, 190-POUNDER, who was all-everything as a Philadelphia high school standout, gained 224 yards against Washington and Lee in his first game as a regular last year, the best one-day performance by any player in the Nation in 1948.

First time he got his hands on the ball he zoomed 60 yards; second time he went 42, and then to convince his coaches they didn't make an error in promoting him to a regular berth he trucked 63 yards.

Papit was ticketed for West Point, but later decided he'd rather be first-string fullback at Virginia than second lieutenant at West Point.

VPI's Wingo, who'll be seen in action tomorrow when the Techmen tangle with Quantico at Alexandria, is probably the fastest man in the area. He's brittle, being constantly banged up, but a sound Wingo under way is practically never caught . . . Duke's Friedlund is tops on reverses, a Wallace Wade specialty. Smacks around that end with plenty of drive and then turns on the speed . . . Georgetown's Conn, currently ailing, is a climax runner who dashes with the best. Went 75 yards for a TD against Boston College without any blocking. If the Hoyas can shake Billy the Kid loose, he'll do the rest on his own . . . Maryland's Mighty Modzelewski is swift and powerful; a 210-pounder who can go all the way . . . Ditto Walt Michales of W & L, but the Generals also warn you to "look out for Ray Leister," a split-T quarterback who likes to exercise his option and run when the time is ripe . . . Sophomore Tommy Birge, an Episcopal High lad, and Veterans Ray Tamalis and Joe Stump are the high-octane lads VMI boasts of . . . Navy has a flock of fancy-steppers, with Frankie Hauff, Bill Powers and Duff Arnold leading the brigade.

Colts, Hornets Play Tonight

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—The blossoming Chicago Hornets, winners of two of their first three games, battle the Baltimore Colts in an All-American Football Conference game under the lights at Soldier Field tomorrow night. The contest figures to produce an exciting passing duel.

The Colts, in their first three losing games, have thrown 80 passes, of which their spectacular quarterback, Y. A. Tittle, tossed 74, completing 3. for a total of 414 yards.

The Hornets, meanwhile, are leading the conference in passes thrown with 82. Robert "Hunchy" Hoernschemeyer, former Indiana star, has clicked with 18 of 39 for 242 yards and two touchdowns, while Johnny Clement clicked with 16 of 38 for 253 yards and one touchdown.

Hornet fans will have a chance to watch three members of the team make their Chicago debut. They are Ted Hazelwood, tackle obtained from the Cleveland Browns; Paul Cleary, end from the New York Yankees, and John Donaldson, halfback from Los Angeles. Donaldson, a rookie from Georgia, is fast and a splendid pass receiver.

Proulx, Oliveri Gain Publinx Final

Fred Proulx meets Andy Oliveri in the championship match of the District Public Links, 1 p. m. Sunday at East Potomac.

Proulx, a relative unknown playing in his first championship, will be facing a three-time former champion in Oliveri.

Oliveri defeated Earl Marcey and Pat Martino, both 3 to 2, to reach the final while Proulx downed Joe Regan, 4 and 3.

George Pigott meets Frank Battista in the second flight final and Ralph McGonigle faces Norm Jarvis in the third flight.

VPI Shifts Beard, Ittner

Virginia Tech will start a revised lineup when it takes the field against the Quantico Marines Saturday at 3 p. m. in George Washington High's Stadium in Alexandria.

Two-hundred-pounder Ralph Beard, Tech's best fullback for the past two years, will make his debut at left guard, and 225-pounder Jack Ittner, Tech's best tackle last year, will be at center.

A winless season which saw the Gobblers score only three touchdowns prompted Coach Bob McNeish to make the changes.

Otherwise, McNeish's starting lineup will find Ron Casto and Oren Hopkins at the ends, Dick Huff and Dick Kuhn at the tackles, Buster Button at the other guard, Bruce Fisher at quarterback, Sterling Wingo and Jay Ratliff at the halfbacks and Eustace (Useless) Frederick at full.

The game is one of the big features of Alexandria's bicentennial celebration, and will be the first college game ever to be staged in the Virginia city. The capacity of the stadium has been increased from 11,500 to 15,000, and the sponsoring Chamber of Commerce is already calling the game a certain sellout.

Man's 'Fence' Death Ruled Accidental

Death of Charles A. Curtis, 54, whose body was found entangled in a fence near his Fairfax County home Tuesday has been ruled accidental by Dr. Nelson Podolnick, county coroner.

County police said Curtis's body was found lying in a little-used road near Igloo Village—a mile west of Falls Church—with the right foot tangled up in a woven wire fence which had extended across the road.

He had been shot once behind the right ear, they said. A .22-caliber rifle, with which Curtis had left home Tuesday afternoon to go squirrel hunting, was found near the body with one shot fired.

Curtis, who lived near Igloo Village, had worked as a specialist with the United States Tariff Commission and more recently had been a salesman for an Arlington real estate firm. He left a wife and two children.

Gridnapped W. Va. Frosh Star Leaves Duke for W. & L.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 15.—Randy Broyles, the Beckley (W. Va.) high school football star whom Washington and Lee accused Duke of "gridnaping," enrolled at W&L today.

Broyles has been practicing with the Duke freshman football team for 10 days. The flashy running back said he changed his mind to come to W&L "because it is much nearer my home."

Broyles and his high school teammate, Don Hodson were originally scheduled to enroll at W & L September 5. Hodson did, but Broyles turned up on the Duke campus instead.

Broyles was voted West Virginia's outstanding high school player.

Uline Undecided On Hockey Club

Six teams have joined the reorganized Eastern Amateur Hockey League but Mike Uline said last night he still wasn't sold on putting in an entry.

However, Uline admitted that he was dickering with League President Tom Lockhart and said he'd make up his mind today. Uline who dropped his Lions out of the American League added, "It's pretty tough not succeeding in seven years and I feel it may be time to give up on hockey in Washington."

Other teams expected to join are Boston Olympics, New York Rovers, Baltimore Clippers, Atlantic City Sea Gulls, Toledo Mercurys, Milwaukee Clarks, Cleveland Knights and Grand Rapids Rockets.

But Some Like It

Senators Ask Better Chow At Capitol

Other Senators like it.

This balance of tastes was worked out yesterday as members of a Senate appropriations subcommittee discussed operation of their eating places at the Capitol.

It started when Capitol Architect David Lynn appeared to ask a $13,500 appropriation to rearrange the cafeteria in the Senate Office Building.

He said it would speed up service.

"I might only say," drawled Senator Burnet Maybank (D., S. C.), "I wish the architect would improve the food rather than the building."

"The architect doesn't have anything to do with the management," Lynn replied.

Up to the witness table came Lewis Marston, manager of the Senate Restaurant, which has been operated for the past two years by the Nationwide Food Service, Inc., of Chicago.

"Why," asked Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) "do we have such poor food in the Senate Restaurant?" He said he recalled one very trying situation when he gagged over one meal.

"The food is not so good around here as it used to be," Maybank said.

"That's right," said McKellar.

Two Senators Defend Food

But there was disagreement from two other Senators.

"I guess I'm unusual," said Senator Guy Cordon (R., Ore), "but I thought the food was better since these people (the Chicago firm) took over."

Senator Carl Hayden (D., [illegible]) chairman of the Senate Rules Committee which oversees operation of the restaurant, also defended the food, but said "maybe I have a digestion like an ostrich."

Senator McKellar asked why the restaurant operates at a loss. Hayden said the Chicago firm had cut down the losses of earlier years. Cordon joined him to explain that, with the restaurant keeping open most of the day while relying on the noon meal for most of its business, it is bound to operate at a loss.

As for the food awaiting the Senators when they finished their hearing, yesterday's menu offered the usual variety ranging from a grilled sirloin steak at $2.50 down to the traditional cup of bean soup at 15 cents.

Pelley Makes Another Bid For Parole

William Dudley Pelley, former leader of the Silver Shirts of America, yesterday made another bid for parole from the 15-year sentence he is serving in Indiana for violation of sedition laws.

Through his lawyer, T. Emmett McKenzie, he filed a petition for a writ of mandamus in District Court here, charging the U. S. Parole Board with "arbitrary action beyond the scope of duty" in refusing him parole. He was eligible for parole in August, 1947.

The suit charges that two board members said it would be "impolitic" at this time to parole him because the defense counsel in the Communist trial in New York would claim the United States government "favors anti-Communists and prosecutes Communists."

Attached to the petition were letters from Judge Robert C. Baltzell, who sentenced Pelley in August, 1942; Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut, former special assistant to the Attorney General who prosecuted the case, and Oscar R. Ewing, Administrator of the Federal Security Agency, all approving Pelley's parole.

2 Boys Seized In Herndon Theft Series

Eight housebreakings committed in Herndon, Va., Monday have been cleared up Fairfax County police reported yesterday, with the arrest of two boys in Manassas, Va.

Arrested Wednesday night and charged with eight counts of housebreaking and one count of attempted housebreaking, police said, were Charles Kelliher, 18, and a 16-year-old juvenile, both of Manassas.

Police said Kelliher has admitted his part in the housebreakings, which netted more than $500 in cash and merchandise. He is said to have implicated the other boy.

Police said they tracked the youths down with the help of these leads: discovery of a stolen car near Manassas containing some clothing stolen from Herndon; a tip from a woman who said she drove two boys answering their general description to Manassas Tuesday, and a report that the boys had been seen there wearing new clothing resembling other stolen articles.

The boys are being held in Manassas on an auto theft charge, Fairfax police said, and will be taken to Fairfax for a preliminary hearing Monday.

Residents Urged To Contribute for Ecuador Homeless

The Commissioners yesterday called upon District residents to actively participate in Ecuador Relief Week starting Monday.

In a proclamation, the city heads said the observance is aimed to highlight the plight of more than 1000 people of Ecuador who were left homeless by the recent earthquake there.

They urged local citizens to send contributions to the Ecuador Relief Fund, care of the Pan American Union, Washington 6, D. C.

Mayor Missed By Gunfire in Harlan County

Evarts, Ky., Sept. 15 (AP).—State police disclosed today that several shots were fired at Mayor Elihu Bailey last night from the darkness outside his home in this Harlan County community.

Bailey returned a short time earlier from Hazard, where he was taken by a special bailiff to testify in a murder case against former Evarts Police Chief Isachar Combs and his assistant, Lewis Deaton.

There was no indication, however, whether there was any connection between the trial and the shooting last night. Bailey had no comment.

State police said he told them seven or eight shots were fired through the front of his combination grocery store and dwelling. One of the shots barely missed him, police reported.

The officers quoted Bailey as saying a man called to him while he was eating last night. Bailey went to the front through the grocery store. The lights were off but the shots were fired into the darkened grocery. Bailey tripped over a crate of groceries, police said, and stumbled. This may have caused the bullets to miss him, they said.

Jess Larson, head of General Services Administration, will speak before the society at the next meeting, October 20.

Dreamy Fashions for Sleepy-Time Gals

Velvet, Quilted Cottons Popular For Negligees, Lounge Costumes

This is the last in a series of 10 articles on fall fashions.

By Peggy Preston

DROOLING dreamily over the current crop of negligees and lounge costumes the other day we were jerked back to reality by recalling a true story. It goes like this:

A young girl, soon to be married, wanted to give her fiance a birthday gift—a bathrobe, to be exact. Turning for advice to a happily married matron, she asked what kind of robe she should select.

"The very best one you can find, my dear," directed the matron. "You'll never buy anything you'll wear so much"

Now, naturally, there will be occasions when your husband is wearing his robe, or it is at the cleaners, or it is so old that even you won't wear it. Also, you may be living in a maleless household, in which there is nary an oversized robe to latch onto.

In these events, you're the girl we're talking to. You and the woman who wants a good-looking, comfortable housecoat, negligee, lounge robe or whatever you choose to call it.

Style, Charm in Velvet

If velvet trimmed with rhinestones is your dish, then you can find plenty of luxurious numbers from which to make a selection. But don't be disheartened if you can't afford one. For it is quite amazing how much style and charm has been incorporated into garments of this type which carry the nicest kind of price tags. For an investment of $10, $12 or $14 you can find a really becoming and serviceable robe.

Some of the little quilted cottons, reaching just above the ankle, are especially outstanding. Although made of simple fabric they are well cut and styled, easy to slip in and out of. They are a far cry, indeed, from the old-fashioned clumsy house robes that were always missing a belt or gathering dust as they trailed the floor.

Central heating has had a marked influence on the costumes we wear at home, and heavy flannel robes are no longer the necessity they once were. Replacing them are these same quilted cottons, warm and snug enough to be comfortable when the automatic furnace takes its nightly dip. Corduroy is another high favorite in the utility division of house coats, and rayon crepes, quilted and interlined with cotton padding are also attractive and wearable.

Leisure clothes for dormitory life are an important wardrobe item for the college girl. This season she is being offered all manner of tricky indoor costumes, some of which are designed to go outdoors with her, if she hasn't time to change. Among them is the Doodle coat and Tommie's corduroy jacket.

Beer Jacket Revived

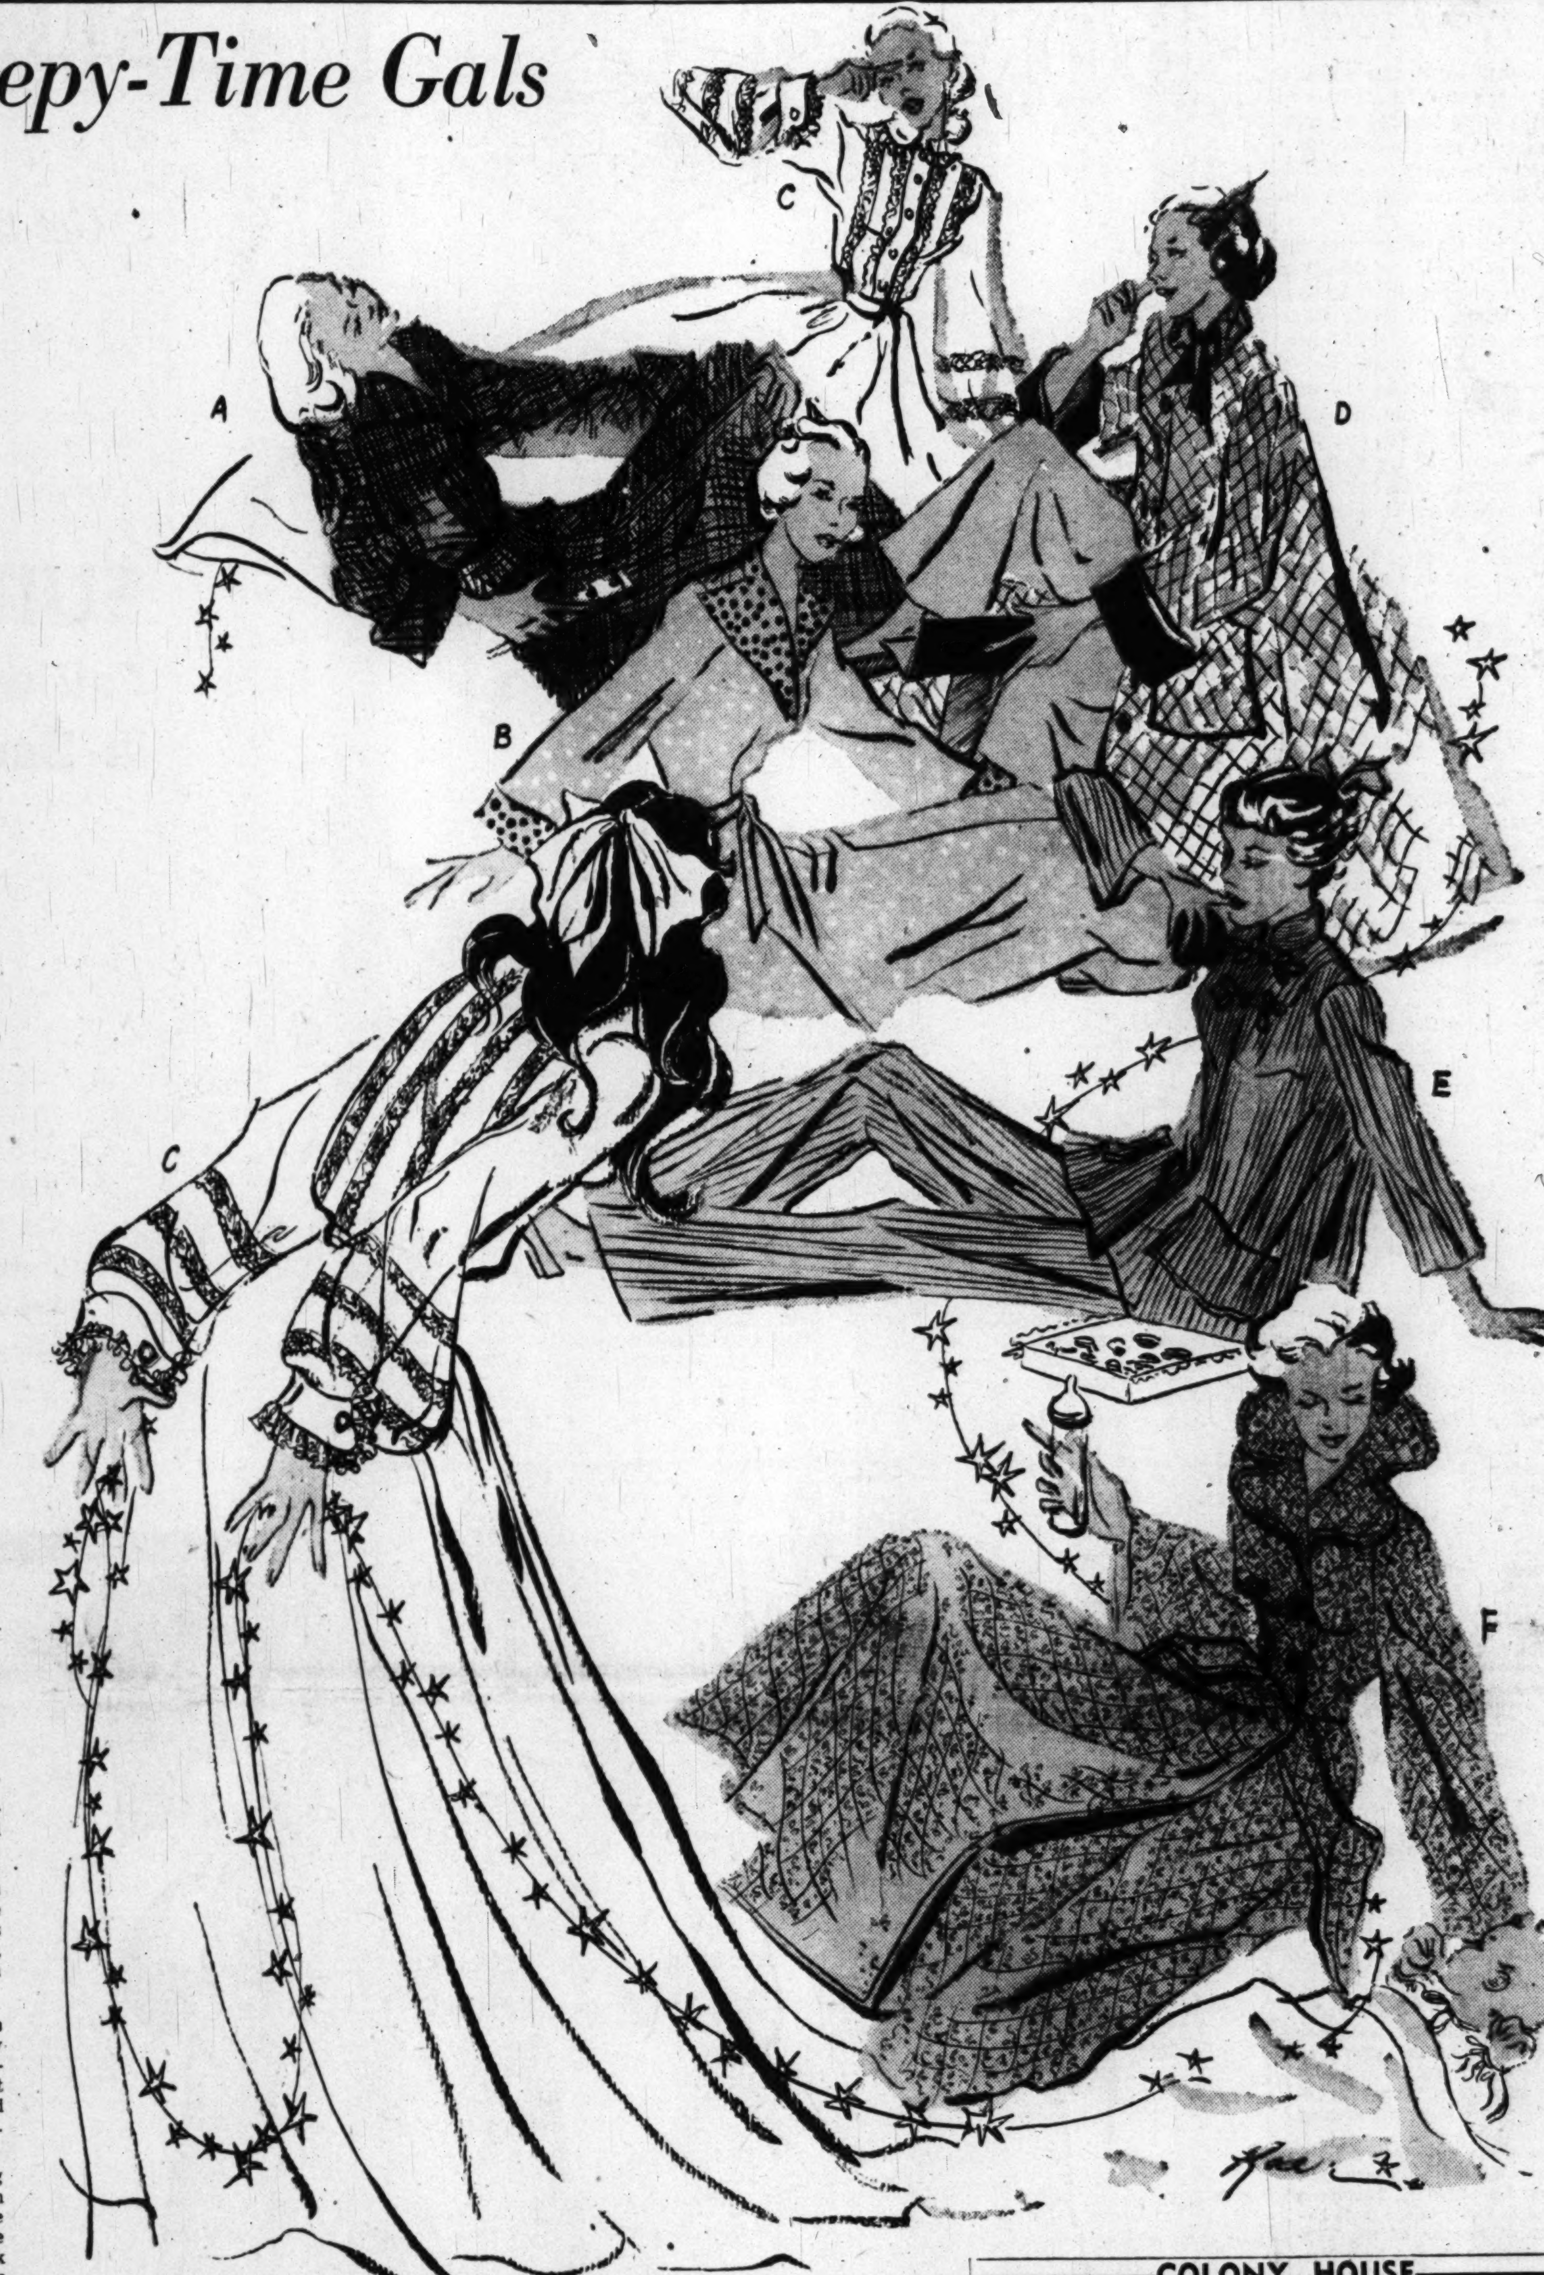
The former is a 1949 revival of the popular beer jacket in sanforized muslin with four bright colored pockets, and the latter is a finger-tip-length jacket with a pointed collar and detachable half belt in back. Indoors they make a fine smock, lounge coat or cover-up robe; outdoors the jacket is equally good as a campus coat. And, it is said, the Doodle coat can be worn for sleeping, too.

For travel, when a simple, tailored robe is called for, there are inexpensive pure silk garments available which will roll up like a handkerchief and fit into a small corner of your overnight bag.

The supply of frilly, lace-trimmed negligees is not overabundant at this season, the biggest demand for this type coming at Christmas. However, October brides will be able to find enough to make a good selection for their trousseaux.

Handsome hostess gowns are a comparatively new addition to the American woman's wardrobe. They flourished first on the West Coast, where lounge clothes are as important as sports togs. In recent years they have invaded the East, and as the winter progresses we will be seeing more and more of them in local stores.

Many of these garments are lovely enough to double as a dinner dress and smart women often treat them as such. Sheer wool, embroidered in silk or studded with brilliants, makes exquisite robes of this type, and satin, crepe or velvet are equally beautiful, although not quite so high fashion.



A. GAY TARTAN PLAID in stiff rayon taffeta makes a novel hostess coat or lounge robe. This one is sashed at the waistline with a black velvet ribbon and it has big, roomy pockets.

B. IDEAL TO TUCK into your overnight bag is this soft rayon crepe, tailored robe in navy blue with aqua dots. The colors are reversed on the lapels and cuffs. Both A and B are from Kann's.

C. IF YOU'RE trousseau shopping here's a negligee you will want to consider. Made of chalk white crepe, it has insets of lace on the bodice and small ruffles of the same lace around the collar and cuffs. Front view is shown at the top of the page, the back at lower left. From Lansburgh's.

D. DORM DWELLERS want a warm, snug robe for late study hours. Filling those requirements is this pretty brunch coat made of quilted white crepe and lined with brilliant crimson. From Jean Matou's.

E. FIRE ENGINE red lounging pajamas will make quite a splash among slumber party fans. These are of corduroy with a coolie coat jacket, buttons with black frogs at the neckline. From The Hecht Co.

F. COMFORTABLE, BECOMING ROBE can help take the sting out of those 2 and 6 a. m. feedings, when Junior is yelling his lungs out and the world looks mighty black indeed. Our young mother wears a warm, quilted cotton printed with tiny flowers against a pastel background. It is just above ankle length, has a fitted, double breasted bodice and full skirt with ample pockets. At Philipsborn's.

Tobe' Says . . .

Faille Dress New Daytime Basic

EVER SINCE the fashion revolution in fabrics brought crisp fabrics in as the major dress fashion, the $64 question has been "What will replace crepes in basic dresses?"

I've always believed it would be faille, but until this fall, there were never enough good one-piece failles to prove it. Now however, there is no doubt at all that the faille dress is fast becoming the new daytime basic.

The faille coat dress is already a favorite—so is the suit dress. With their new softer styling, there is a type for every woman.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Widow Would Like to Act on Invitation From Bachelor Friend to Visit His Home, Hear Music Records, But Is It Proper?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a widow, 47, locally employed in a professional capacity, and in the course of my work I have become friends with a pleasant scholarly bachelor who is about 50.

As I live in a rooming house, I have no place to entertain, and more than once this gentleman has suggested that I might like to spend an evening in his apartment, listening to his musical recordings, of which he has a choice collection. I should very much like to accept, but as I was reared in the horse-and-buggy era, I am a little doubtful about being so "bold."

I have broached the idea to several of my friends, and while some believe it would be perfectly all right for me to go, others firmly advise against it; and in fact one older woman said emphatically, "Drop the man immediately."

If we were young people, impulsive and adventurous or in love, I can agree that there might be risks in that type of visiting; but in view of our age and good common sense, not to mention our respectable status, don't you think an exception might be made for us? I want your frank opinion and I intend to abide by it.

E. G.

Mature Character Isn't Constricted

DEAR E. G.: Everyone who attempts to advise you on this question is likely to give a slightly different answer from the next person. For that reason, to avoid confusion, my recommendation is to follow the promptings of your own conscience and social judgment, in deciding whether to act on the invitation.

If visiting the man's apartment would make you feel vaguely defensive, "scarlet" or apologetic, then or later, I'd say it's better not to go. But if you could stroll in there at peace with your thoughts, as much at ease and as cheerfully curious as if you were entering a woman friend's home for the first time—or as casually as the man might call at your home, if you had one,—then I'd say suit yourself and go if you choose.

It seems to me that persons approximately 50 years of age have (or should have) reached a pitch of mature understanding of what they're doing and why; and that they are entitled to be more concerned with the substance than with the "seeming" of their actions.

Upright Spirits Don't Apologize

KNOWING what it's all about (as the saying goes); knowing what moral or social values the so-called proprieties are designed to uphold, they surely ought to feel competent to meet new situations ingeniously rather than stuffily, and without fearing loss of "face." Anyhow, it's my belief that persons your age may do as they please if their ethics are good and their actions decent, even though unconventional by Madame Grundy's standards.

Now one last word: If you do decide to visit the man's apartment for an evening of music, don't "undignify" your friendly acceptance of his hospitality by making copious explanations to mutual acquaintances. The creed of the self-respecting person is this (remember it)—"Never explain; your friends don't need it and your enemies won't believe it.

THESE nice, juicy slices of meat are freshly carved from a beef pot roast. They're tops in flavor and tender from long, slow cooking

Less Expensive Cuts

Time Right for a Thrifty Pot Roast

By Lucia Brown

WITH beef prices rising and the weather getting nippy, the time is just right for serving a good, thrifty pot roast with plenty of rich brown gravy.

Less expensive cuts of beef are needed for this homey dish. It's an ideal way to cook grass-fed beef—so much more plentiful now than the select corn-fed kind—because it gives it a "tenderizing" treatment.

Boneless, chunky rump roast is favored for pot roast because it's so easily carved. Two other popular choices are the arm and blade pot roasts cut from the beef chuck.

Onions, tomatoes and carrots are the vegetables that usually keep the roast company in the pot. However, why not replace these with such fall favorities as turnips, squash or parsnips, or with green beans or peas? Just let your conscience—and your own taste—be your guide. Be sure to add the vegetables just long enough before the end of the estimated cooking time so that they will be tender but not overcooked.

To go with the roast, you'll have the vegetables cooked with it, of course. You might add some mashed potatoes to the menu, too—wonderful with the gravy!—a carrot-raisin salad, and some hot bran muffins. For dessert, have peach Brown Betty and, as beverages, milk for the youngsters and coffee for grown-ups.

SAVORY POT ROAST

4 pounds beef rump or chuck pot roast
2 onions, sliced
1 clover garlic, sliced
2 tablespoons lard or drippings
Salt and pepper
2 bay leaves
1 cup boiling water

First, brown the onions and garlic in lard or drippings. Then put in the meat and brown it slowly on all sides to develop flavor and an attractive appearance. Flour the meat if desired before putting it in the pan, or leave it unfloured. After the meat is browned, add the seasonings, bay leaves and water. Cover tightly and simmer 3 hours or until tender. Add more liquid if necessary. Add vegetables not more than a half hour before the roast is done so that they won't be overcooked. Some of them won't even require a half hour. Just allow your usual time on them or check time in your cookbook.

When roast is done, strain off liquid and measure. For each cup, add two tablespoons of flour, making it into a thin paste with cold water before adding. Cook gravy until thickened, stirring constantly. Serve in separate gravy boat to be ladled over the meat, potatoes and vegetables.

Dieting Does It for Young Heavyweight

Ida Jean Kain's 12-Day Slimming Program for teen-agers begins in The Washington Post Monday, September 19.

By Ida Jean Kain

ONCE upon a time there was an unhappy young lady, age 16, who tipped the scales at 175 pounds. Her story, with its happy ending, is the best way I know to get you teen-agers set for your special series which begins Monday . . .

"'It's never fun to be fat, but it's worse in the spring, especially if you're young." So began your column one day two years ago, and I read it, fascinated. It was a bitter truth I knew by heart, but had been afraid to face.

"Grimly I went to the dusty scales. I was 5' 5" and weighed 175—bust 39," waist 33," hips 42." I was 16, aching for the happy laughter and little romances of youth. I wore dark, matronly 20's.

"I had read your column before in idle, wistful curiosity. Now it became what the Good Book must be to one in deep spiritual trial. That column hung in our kitchen, and I read it before every meal. I decided to try your wonderful plan of fruit, vegetables and protein: a poached egg, plain toast, milk and fruit for breakfast; one slice (whole wheat) or two for lunch as a sandwich with egg or lean meat, lettuce, carrots, etc., fruit, and a small glass of milk from the soda fountain where we students ate; and lean meat, plenty of vegetables and fruit for dinner.

"After the first stubborn pounds went, it was surprisingly easy. I would only concentrate on getting below the next 5-pound mark. I exercised and became interested in the sports I had been too heavy and self-conscious for—swimming (my favorite), hiking, fencing and dancing, ballroom and modern.

"This spring I weighed just under 130, nearly perfect for a small-boned 5 ft. 6½ in. (I grew 1½ inches—that helped)—with a 35-in. bust, 27-in. waist and 37-in. hips. I mean to continue exercise and keep my figure.

"Last year I started college, where the food, no longer especially planned for me, was a problem. But I followed your suggestions, and when there was a tempting dessert I asked myself, 'Is this better than a bid to the spring formal?'

"The year's biggest dance came almost on the anniversary of my crusade, and I think I was the happiest girl on the campus, waltzing in a beautiful new blue net formal—size 14!

"'I'm Cinderella tonight,' I smiled, going down the lounge steps, 'and my fairy godmother is Ida Jean Kain.' My handsome escort saw my smile and came to meet me with my flowers. I wouldn't have traded the look in his eyes for all the sundaes in the world . . .

"I hope my experience will in some way encourage other young heavyweights, with their doctor's permission, to try this plan. It is so worth it!"

Your Baby and Mine

Old Adage 'Eat for Two' Still Good Today for Nursing Mother

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

THERE is a real value to the nursing mother in eating generously. The old-fashioned advice to "eat for two" has, like so much folk-knowledge, proved to be wise and beneficial. Not that the mother needs to stuff herself with sweets and starches and put fat she will be hard put to get rid of; but she does need a diet that is high in proteins (the cell-building element)—in vegetables, fruits, whole grain cereals, milk, and butter.

Mrs. T. J. S. writes: "I don't want to go overboard eating while I am nursing my baby. I never was a big eater, and what with carrying the baby and all, I feel less and less like eating.

"What is the least I can eat and still nurse my baby successfully? How long should I wait after nursing before eating a food that will upset the baby and give him gas?

"What do you think of taking the baby off the breast after three months and putting him on a bottle?"

This is what I advise. Eat both a medium portion of meat and two eggs once a day. Eat fresh and cooked fruit, fresh and cooked vegetables (a medium portion of each) at two meals. Eat one piece of bread and butter with each meal, and drink one glass of milk also with each meal. This is your basic diet. You may add to this anything your fancy desires, provided your small appetite demands more than the above.

There is some belief (and nurses in hospitals confirm it) that when a nursing mother eats onions, cabbage, and radishes, the nursing babies seem to have gas pains from them. I am sure this is an individual reaction, so test it with yourself.

It would be a shame to wean a 3-month-old child if you are still successful in nourishing him. Wait until the baby demonstrates clearly that he isn't getting enough to eat. You don't know how fortunate you are.

Mrs. Rohde Acclaimed

No Bias in Danish Protests Concerning Perle Mesta, Just Reserved Sympathy

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

EARLY SPRING, when rumors rifed Perle Mesta might be appointed envoy to Denmark, the Danish press emitted doleful, protesting howls. In Copenhagen, this department learned there was no personal animosity against the new Mme. Minister to Luxembourg.

The politically conscious element dreaded having a second woman as top United States diplomat for a most sympathetic reason. Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rohde, the first of President Roosevelt's two feminine appointments to ministerial posts, had achieved such affectionate recognition, it was felt that any other woman would suffer in comparison. At least that's what a number of varied, unrelated sources insisted.

So President Truman's appointment of the Silver-Tongued Orator's daughter as alternate delegate to the United Nations, is a most happy choice. Mrs. Rohde's talents, so eminently suited to public life, have remained fallow far too long.

Incidentally, it's generally believed that women diplomats are rarer than a cool August in Washington. Though women have seldom been publicized as cookie-pushers or members of the striped pants brigade (!), the State Department actually has some 300 career women on the payroll.

They are Foreign Service officers, Foreign Service staff officers (economists, analysts and such), fiscal and financial experts.

No. 1 in rank of the career women is Frances Willis, who formerly held down an important job as assistant chief of the Division of Western European Affairs and is now a first secretary in our London Embassy.

A local gal, well known in the Capital's more socially sedate circles, is Rebecca Wellington, who is stationed in Berlin where she is a political analyst for the Foreign Service Staff.

There's a rumor going the rounds that a number of women with responsible jobs will be ousted, or rather their positions will be abolished, in the State Department reorganization. Jobs are being done away with, sure, but there's no special drive against feminine hired help. Anyone who is expendable will be expended to help the taxpayer—that's all.

Stamps for Bernadotte

IN THE RUSH of world events, the tragic death, the unselfish contribution of Count Folke Bernadotte, mediator in Palestine, tends to be forgotten. However in Sweden his memory is being kept tender by the issue of a commemorative stamp which is used like our Christmas seals, its sale benefiting charity. Countess Bernadotte, the former Estelle Manville, still keeps her mother's Park ave. apartment and will make a brief visit to New York this month. Countess Bernadotte heads up Sweden's Girl Scouts and last month presided at an international encampment just outside Stockholm.

All White Wedding

LONDON (U.P.).—Marion Stein, the Austrian refugee who found sanctuary and story-book romance in Britain, has announced she will have an "all white" wedding when she is married to the Earl of Harewood September 29.

King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will interrupt their vacation at Balmoral, Scotland, to attend the ceremony at St. Marks, in swank Mayfair, and the reception later at St. James Palace.

The Earl of Harewood, as King George's nephew, is eleventh in line of succession to the British throne.

The 22-year-old pianist said she and her four attendants will all wear white. Traditionally that color is worn by the bride alone. The bridegroom, who is 26, and his brother, the Hon. Gerald Lascelles, who will be best man, will wear morning clothes.

Eating in the Kitchen

If you serve a great many of your meals in one part of a large kitchen, have a low attractive lamp for your table. About Removing Stain From Print Dress

I would appreciate it if you could tell me how to remove a chocolate drink stain from an aqua-blue print dress. I put the dress of partly spun rayon and cotton in the washing machine before I knew the stain was there, and when I tried to get it out with cleaning fluid, I failed. Then I tried several things on it, but failed each time. It has left several rings where the chocolate ran in the material.

Is there anywhere I can get a paper giving me these hints?
T. V. H.

Washing the dress with the stain in it has probably set it so that using a bleach probably is the only method which will remove it now, if it can be removed. Of course, a bleach could affect the color, so be sure to test it on an inconspicuous spot before applying it to the stain.

Try sodium perborate as a bleach. Dampen the stain, sprinkle the perborate onto it and rub into the fabric with the fingers. Let stand 30 minutes and rinse out thoroughly. If the stain is lightened and the dress color is unaffected, treatment may be repeated.

The United States Department of Agriculture has an excellent publication on stain removal. To get it write for "Stain Removal," Farmer's Bulletin No. 1474, Superintendent of Documents, United States Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. When you write, send 5 cents for mailing.

Could you help me with this color scheme problem? The walls in my living room are yellow, or a deep rich cream. My couch is a light tan or beige with a very small figure in it. I would like to know the colors I could use for draperies and scatter rugs without having to redecorate the walls. The furniture for this room is mahogany. M. M. J.

Since your walls and couch are neutral in color with little figures, I suggest you choose gay draperies with lots of color and a decided pattern. With yellow and beige, draperies patterned in a yellow, green, and deep brown would be attractive. With this the rugs could be deep brown or a beige just darker than the upholstery. Since scatter rugs break up the floor space, you will better achieve an uncluttered, harmonious effect if the rugs are all alike and plain or with very little pattern.

Will you please send me or print in your column the recipes for sour cream biscuits and Brunswick stew? J. C.

Sour Cream Biscuits

2 cups sifted all purpose flour
½ teaspoon soda.
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons shortening
2/3 to ¾ cup sour cream

Sift together dry ingredients; cut in shortening until well mixed and add milk, stirring quickly until a soft but not sticky dough is formed. Turn out on lightly floured or cloth-covered board and knead gently to shape into smooth ball; roll lightly or pat ½ to 1 inch thick and cut. Bake in a very hot oven (450 degrees F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 12 2-inch biscuits or 18 to 24 1-1/3-inch biscuits.

Brunswick Stew

1 fowl (3 lb.) cut in pieces
Boiling water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup chopped onion
1½ cups green lima beans
2 cups canned tomatoes
1½ cups sweet corn
Dash of pepper
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Cover chicken with hot water and cook 1½ hours; add salt, onion, lima beans, and tomatoes and cook ½ hour longer. Remove chicken, pick meat from bone and chop fine; return to stew, add corn, pepper and Worcestershire sauce and cook until thick. Yield: Six portions.

I am searching for a school where I can learn to cook some European dishes. I have learned that Cordon Bleu classes are now given in Washington. Can you enlighten me? M. W. L.

Cordon Bleu French cooking classes will be taught at the Young Women's Christian Association at 17th and K sts. nw., beginning the week of October 3. The class is given one day a week, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, 10:15 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., or Monday or Thursday evening, 7 to 9:15 p. m. The course runs for 10 classes. I suggest you call the "Y" for further information and to register.

In my neck of the country, wood for a miniature fireplace is expensive to prepare. But, we have rafts of newspapers. Could this paper be prepared in some way that would be good for fireplace burning? You know, not just flare up in a minute, but burn slowly and glowingly? R. L.

Newspapers can be rolled into tight, compact rolls, wet throughout, allowed to dry and used for fuel. When the rolls are wet, press each roll tightly together so that the sheets of paper stick together. In this way when the roll is thoroughly dry it will burn much more slowly than unrolled paper.

President of '99s Joins Navy; Brackenridge Club Aids Orphans

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

THE president of the '99s, an organization of licensed women pilots, was sworn into the United States Naval Reserve yesterday by the president of the Washington Chapter, Women Flyers of America, when Mary Livingston received her lieutenant (j. g.) commission from WAVE Lieut. Frances Biadasz.

Miss Livingston was sworn in at the Naval Air Station in Anacostia. Employed by the Public Health Service as an architect, she is a graduate of George Washington University and has attended Corcoran Art School.

'Friendship' Is Their Motto

ONE forlorn, hungry Greek orphan soon will wear new shoes, warm clothing and appease his hunger. For he will be taken care of by members of the National M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club here whose motto is friendship.

Friendship is no idle slogan to these club women, for they practice it by making others happy. For example, club members will continue to support two Chinese children, educate a native African girl who in turn will teach her people. Last year the club also sent food and clothing to 15 Finnish doctors. This project, established in memory of the late Dr. Erich W. Schwartze, will be continued. Dr. Schwartze was the husband of the Washington Branch's founder.

Mrs. Schwartze will leave September 18 for Texas and Mexico. She will help the newly formed San Antonio Brackenridge Club set up its main project for the year. Then she will accompany Mrs. Zada Martin, head of the San Antonio Zonta Club, to Mexico City, where they will assist in organizing a Brackenridge Club there.

AMVETS Clover on Sale

THE white clover means "think of me," and you will find plenty of the paper kind being sold on the streets today and tomorrow.

The official flower of the AMVETS and its auxiliary, the white clover grew in profusion in the fields of Normandy when our boys made their historic D-Day invasion.

Each year AMVETS and its auxiliary appeal to the public for funds, through the sale of these flowers, for the purpose of carrying on their child welfare work and service program. This program includes service to the hospitalized veteran, to the veteran in need of rehabilitation and to the orphans of the World War II veterans.

DAR Group Licks Parking

Parking cars was no trouble at the annual State chairmen's meeting of the Maryland State Society, Daughter of the American Revolution. In fact, the Maryland Societ ymade all arrangements for special parking in lot "D" of the University of Maryland at College Park.

At the meeting which opened yesterday each State chairman in three minutes told of her plans and programs for the year's work. The meeting was held in the Central Auditorium, in the Education Building, with luncheon at 1 p. m. in the Terrapin dining room.

75 Ex-OSS Officers To Get Thai Honors

Approximately 75 former OSS officers who served in Thailand during the war will be decorated at 5:30 p. m. today at the Thai Embassy.

Many of the decorations will be made in absentia since a large number of the former officers do not live in this area. But at least 30 of them will be at the Embassy for the ceremony.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—The Russians for the first time allowed an American movie company to film scenes in the Soviet sector of Berlin last Saturday, when Director George Seaton—who had to man the camera himself because of the crew limitation—took Paul Douglas and Montgomery Clift there for scenes in "Two Corridors East." They had to listen to 15 minutes of Soviet propaganda, via a loud speaker installed on the outdoor set, before they could begin . . . In this film, incidentally, Douglas had to punch the 6-foot German, Franz Nichlisch, who was wobbly for six hours. "I can't understand it," said Douglas. "I hit Celeste Holm just as hard in 'Everybody Does It,' and never even staggered her."

General Wedemeyer may publish his full report on China as a book . . . John Golden, the producer, lunched at Sardi's with Playwright Frederic Lonsdale and J. Robert Rubin of MGM. Golden couldn't stop their discussion of monetary systems, and finally said: "Frankly, all I know about monetary systems is that in the transactions you should try to grab a little for yourself" . . . Bill Carey, the former head of Madison Square Garden, is celebrating his seventieth birthday today, at the Leahy Clinic in Boston where he's awaiting his fifth operation.

John Lund, who plays Martin & Lewis' manager in "My Friend Irma," had to darken his hair because the director said he didn't look like a manager. After Lund dyed his hair he found that Abby Greschler, Martin & Lewis' real manager, is completely bald . . . Vincent Sheean's leg, broken in an auto smashup, is in a plaster cast . . . Huntington Hartford, III, the A. & P. heir who married the Ciro's cigarette girl this week, once was married to the present Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, jr. He wrote a long, unpublished novel about their marriage. "And in writing it out," he confessed, "I learned my mistakes and why the breakup was my fault."

The American Croquet Championships will be held this weekend at the Long Island homes of Mrs. Margaret Emerson and Mrs. Nelson Doubleday. The Gerald Brooks Memorial Trophy for the singles winner, hasn't taken been awarded since 1937, when H. B. Swope, jr., won it. The other winners' names are about to be engraved on it, but W. Averell Harriman can't remember whether he won it once or twice . . . John Garfield, who'll make his next film at Fox, tells of the time in 1942 when Jack Warner suspended him, then finally told his aides: "Let's settle with Garfield. Why should there be two wars?"

Harold J. Kennedy, the producer-playwright-lecturer, spent the summer producing shows at the Princeton Playhouse. It was a summer rich with experience for the producer, and included even a front-paged fight with Michael Todd and Joan Blondell . . . Last week Producer Kennedy flew South to join Kay Francis' troupe and play opposite the star in "Let Us Be Gay" . . . "I did it for the novelty," the producer explained." For a change I wanted to see what it's like to have someone pay me on Saturday night."

New Explorations Add to Proof of Tomb's Existence

Vatican City, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said yesterday recent explorations under St. Peter's basilica gave added proof of the existence of the tomb of St. Peter.

L'Osservatore said excavations made in recent years have "increased and strengthened archeological proof of the existence of St. Peter's tomb, placed there to mark the place of his martyrdom."

Three weeks ago, the Vatican radio urged Catholics to await a "great revelation" by the Holy See concerning the tomb of the prince of the apostles.

L'Osservatore said the existence of St. Peter's tomb was attested to by historical and traditional proofs bound to the coming to Rome of the Saints Peter and Paul and their martyrdom.

This, the Vatican paper said, was "believed for 16 centuries until Protestant controversy cast doubt on Peter's death at Rome, without, however, indicating any other place."

President Calls Guard, Reserve Defense Backbone

President Truman, an old militiaman himself, put in a plug yesterday for the National Guard recruiting drive.

He told a news conference that the National Guard and the reserve are the backbone of this country's defense and he hopes the forthcoming drive will be a success.

He said he joined the National Guard on Flag Day in 1905. When he was moved from the rear to the front rank, he thought it was the finest promotion he had got up to that time.

He joined up with the then Battery B in Kansas City. This battery later became a part of the 129th Field Artillery of the Thirty-fifth Division.

Subsequently, Mr. Truman commanded Battery D of the 129th Field Artillery in the First World War in France.

Navy Men Held At Healthiest In 100 Years

United States sailors are the healthiest in 100 years.

Rear Admiral C. A. Swanson, Navy Surgeon General, reported yesterday that the incidence rate for diseases, injuries and poisonings among Navy officers and men during the 1948 calendar year dropped to 442.8 per 1000. That was the lowest since naval medical department records were started in 1850.

A continuing downtrend in venereal rate was 66.6 per 1000, as compared with 85.8 the previous year.

"It's all right—he's my brother"

The Family Scrapbook

Fishing for Lies

All of us, children and adults alike, naturally try to protect ourselves. So, if one asks a child, "Did you mark all over the wallpaper?" or "Did you eat those cookies?" one can expect a denial most of the time. This will be true especially if he expects punishment for his misdeeds.

If there's no possible question of the youngster's responsibility for misdeeds, it's better to take for granted that he's done it and work out the problem with him. To make him admit it first only adds to his difficulty in facing up to the situation.

Extreme or unfair punishment also contributes to a child's tendency toward protective lying. If, on the other hand, he has learned from experience that mother or dad will be firm but fair, there's no percentage in lying.

Since one of the most important of human agents is the ability to take responsibility for one's behavior, parents should avoid tactics which encourage a child to lie in order to avoid such responsibility.

This Funny World

"If you men weren't so stubborn we could all go home!"

TRY IT

Here is a simple way to have toast with your egg that will be a novelty to many. This is an old trick that has been tried many times by people who like to do their own cooking while fishing or camping out. The advantage of this method is that you have your toast and egg ready at the same time and thus they both keep warm longer.

To cook your egg on a bread raft tear out, on the center of a slice of bread, or take a biscuit cutter and remove the center. Place as many slices as are needed in a skillet with a spoon of butter or fat, and break an egg into the center of each slice. Cook slowly and when the toast is brown on one side turn it over and brown the other side. Season to suit your taste and serve piping hot. This trick will often convert a child who ordinarily doesn't eat eggs into one who likes to have them cooked in this manner.

Egg them on!

What's the Verdict

HORSE THIEF

Q. Daniels was sued by Peters for libel, Peters claiming that Daniels had maliciously spread the story that Peters had been hanged as a horse thief. Daniels' defense is that the allegel libel consisted of a letter to a mutual friend in which he said: "I have bad news. I hear Peters has been hanged for stealing horses. It must have been a terrible mistake. I never was so sorry to hear anything in my life."

A. It is no defense to a libel action that the defendant (Daniels) was merely passing on something that somebody else had told him. It certainly is damaging to Peter's reputation, he being alive, to have word spread that he has been hanged as a horse thief. But if Daniels can prove that he wrote the letter in genuine grief at the news, he has a good defense against a suit charging him with maliciously spreading a libel. In a case very similar to this, the plaintiff's suit was thrown out.—F. L. D.

BARNABY

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

What Happened to Our Wartime Patriotism?

Asks Mrs. Joseph L. Scott of 918 18th st. nw.; "Why don't the Nats begin their games with the playing of 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' as is done in so many other big league parks? It's a thrilling addition to America's favorite sport; and if they can do it elsewhere, why not in the Nation's Capital?"

TRADEMARK

Cyril E. Paquin of 2420 16th st. nw. has another suggestion for those whose pipe tobacco gets soggy in Washington's humid weather.

He recommends a handful of "De Moist," wrapped in a piece of cheesecloth. And, like all pipe smokers, he can't resist adding a recommendation for his favorite brand of weed, "Falcon Featherlight."

I'll try his suggestions, but my heart won't really be in it. I've been smoking "888" (from the pipe shop next to the National Theater) for so long that it wouldn't be advisable to change.

Why, just the other day I forgot my pipe in a society department ashtray, and it was promptly returned to me.

The girls took one sniff, and gasped: "Only one man in the building could own that thing —call him up and tell him to get it out of here."

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT

Joseph Schek, who teaches radio repair classes at Chamberlain Vocational High School, tells me that his boys need more practical experience in this field.

They'd like to have some non-functioning radios to repair, and they're not particular what make or model or type you bring them.

District Liner Schek says there is no charge for these repairs; you pay only for the parts, which seldom cost more than $5.

There's no pickup or delivery service, but the students will be glad to repair your set if you bring it to Chamberlain Vocational High Schol, 13th st. and Potomac ave. se., between noon and 3 p. m.; or Monday and Thursday evenings between 6:30 and 9:30.

It usually takes about 10 days to complete the repairs, and Instructor Schek says: "These lads have had a great deal of experience, and their work is good."

Dear Bill:

I've heard every one of your broadcasts on WRC. Does that set some kind of record?

Dear Mr. Devine:

I was under the impression that anybody who had heard the show twice had tied for the record.

PERSONAL NOTES

M. O. Coleman, 520 7th st. se.: Good catch. What we meant to say, of course, was that the penalties might be levied against those who bring in more than the legal limit of beer or liquor.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

Louise H. Puleo of 1312 Tuckerman st. nw. marvels at the widespread appeal of our Washington Post Homes of '49. A recent news story said:

"A dining room with walls covered in a floral chintz fabric drew raves from crows at the W. C. & A. N. Miller home in Spring Valley."

A fine way to talk about prospective purchasers.

'TWAS EVER THUS

When office duties fill my time
I'm heckled by a little rhyme
Which beats, insistent as a drum,
Within my harassed cranium.

But let a day be mine to use
For verse composing, if I choose,
The impish muse is not at bat—
Which may be just as well, at that.

E. Culbreth.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Eleven-year-old Jacqueline L. Flaharty of 134 Longfellow st. nw. reports that a 14th st. dress shop displays the sign:

Elmer Thomas in Egg Market

By Drew Pearson

Something is rotten in the egg market. And Elmer Thomas, the speculating Senator from Oklahome, could tell a lot about it if he wished, though he probably won't.

Thomas

Elmer Thomas (not to be confused with Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah, a pious Mormon former missionary) is the man who was exposed in this column three years ago for simultaneously speculating in cotton and using his influence in the Senate to affect the price of cotton.

At that time Thomas vigorously denied he was speculating, called this columnist a liar, said all the cotton he owned was on his back. But two years later when a Republican Congress required the Secretary of Agriculture to make public the names of those speculating in cotton, Senator Thomas's name was on the list. So also was the name of his wife, his secretary, Miss Beth Gage, and his bosom friend, Dyke Cullum. Furthermore, Thomas admitted in a public statement that Cullum had handled his commodity trading for him.

There is nothing illegal about a Senator speculating on the commodity market—though his ethics are something else again. However, it is almost unbelievable that a Senator—especially the chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee—should use his prestige and high office to influence prices on the commodity market at the same time he is speculating.

Ferguson Outbluffed

Therefore, Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan, then chairman of a Senate investigating subcommittee, was authorized to probe the operations of his colleague from Oklahoma. But Senator Thomas did some quick investigating of his own—of Senator Ferguson. Following which he wrote Ferguson a letter in longhand, later published in this column, threatening to expose certain connections between the Ferguson family and the Chrysler Motor Co.

Confronted with this letter, the Senator from Michigan promptly dropped his investigation of the Senator from Oklahoma.

Eighteen months have passed, and Senator Thomas is now up to his old tricks. Since the Democratic victory last November, he has been restored as chairman of the powerful Agriculture Committee. But not even waiting for the election, the Senator got back into the cotton market last September.

Then, about two weeks ago, Senator Thomas let loose a significant public statement. He took a sudden, surprising interest in eggs, publicly complained about the price of eggs, and blasted the Agriculture Department's egg-price-support program every time the Senate Agriculture Committee met.

Now every housewife would like to see the price of eggs come down. What every housewife does not have is 10 railroad carloads of eggs. And what very few people in the United States knew was that Thomas' intimate friend, Dyke Cullum, had just purchased 10 freight carloads of egg futures. Therefore, he was vitally interested in the future price of eggs.

Thomas Swings Weight

The Senator from Oklahoma has been quite brazen in lending his name to Cullum's attempt to influence the egg market. Not only was one letter written to the Agriculture Department with Thomas' name signed to it regarding the Department's egg-price-support program but Thomas started an official Senate investigation of eggs.

In doing so, Thomas wrote a letter to Senator Clinton Anderson of New Mexico, whom he placed in charge of the investigation, asking that he call certain people as witnesses. And in listing them he scrupulously avoided the name of W. D. Termohlen, Agriculture Department poultry chief, because Dyke Cullum had told him that Termohlen was not cooperative.

The 10 carloads of eggs were purchased in Chicago under the name of the National Commodity Corp.
